AILEEN HYNES FILLS ROLE AT HAYMARKET

"Libel" Produced By London Theatre

MUSIC SCHOLARSHIP EXTENDED

A Hong Kong girl has been chosen to fill a small role in a West End play at the Haymarket Theatre, one of the leading theatres in London. She is Miss Aileen Hynes, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hynes, of the General Post Office, and the play is "Libel."

Aileen left Hong Kong in 1931 and has been studying music at the Royal College of Music, England. As the result of her exceptional abilities, the principal of the College has extended her scholarship, to four years. While in Hong Kong Aileen was a pupil at the Central British School, where she showed stage talent in the school plays. Her best role was that of the maid, the leading part, in the play "Between the Soup and the Savory," which was staged at the School's Christmas Party in the Peninsula Hotel in 1930.

The resolutions of the South-west, which were made public today, urge severe punishment for military and civil authorities for failure to obey the orders of the Fourth Kuomintang Congress with regard to Manchuria, resulting in its occupation by Japanese forces.

London, Yesterday.

The Aarhu correspondent of the "Daily Mail" states that the British steamer, Orient City, arrived there after a terrible voyage from Dairen, via Panama.

Terrific gales were encountered off the west coast of the United States. Great waves continually swept the decks; the engine room staff were kept prisoners below. The rest of the crew sheltered on the bridge, momentarily expecting the ship to founder.

The vessel has put in at Mandanillo Bay, Mexico, for nine days, until the crew have recovered. The ship was not damaged, but it is thought that water may have reached the cargo of soya beans.—Reuter.

Canton, Yesterday. Collection of the controlled economy tax on rolled tobacco will take place here on January 1, 1935. The present regulations are being revised with a view to rendering it more satisfactory to the tobacco merchants.

Already, tobacco firms are paying the consolidated tax on tobacco, and the controlled economy tax is an additional levy of 20 per cent. ad valorem. This additional tax is to increase provincial revenue, as the authorities take the position that cigarette smoking is a luxury which justifies a high tax.

He was taken off in a motor-car and was found later chained to the gates of the prison where the persons who were sentenced by the Tribunal were detained.

Tar had been put on his head and the reports, on cardboard, of the cases in which he had prosecuted before the Military Tribunal, were tied around him.

MOUNTAIN CREEK

By N. E. W. BARRETT.

THE morning mists rolled slowly and reluctantly upwards, as the sun peeped over the rim of the mountain. He gazed regularly down upon the peaceful little town in the hollow, as though to say, "Aha! I've caught you again—fast asleep all of you."

But, no! There was one exception that morning. Robbie Cameron had climbed the little path behind Mrs. Arnold's boarding-house, to the big flat rock halfway up the mountain-side. There she stood, the very embodiment of the fresh clean spirit of the early morning; her brown eyes sparkled and her fair hair rippling back in crisp waves, to where it lay coiled low on the nape of her neck.
 "Sleepy Hollow," she murmured.
 "I am going to love you—yes, every nook and cranny." Her slim body poised and alert, she drank in the beauty of the peaceful little village below her, through which flowed a willow-fringed stream, and where dark pine trees lined haphazard, winding street.

Robbie's eyes, for a moment, took on a faraway look, and a deep sadness pervaded her gallant little figure, as in spirit she found herself back among the Scottish hills, where she had known such joy and sorrow. But, no! She had closed that chapter of her life, twelve months ago, when she had fled to this new land. Now, after holiday, quite long enough, with cousins in the city, she had come to this mountain town to take up duty in the office of Paul Benton, the local solicitor.

"Now then, keep your chin up, Roberta," she admonished herself, and, with a gay little laugh at having picked up Australian colloquialism so quickly she retraced her steps downhill, in response to the call of the breakfast gong.

Her fellow-boarders—two bank clerks and three teachers from the local school—greeted her amiably, and regarded her with interest throughout the meal, finding conversation with her frank and easy.
 Ere long, beneath her gay sunshade, she was wending her way down the road to the stream at the bottom, which she had to cross to reach the business portion of the town. Beside the big white bridge built high and dry, Robbie found an attractive rustic bridge beneath the willows. It was little more than a log thrown across from one bank to the other, planned flat on the upper side, with a hand-rail of saplings; but the beauty of the picture against the background of cool green drew Robbie aside down the little by-path to cross it.

Down the road she had just traversed came Paul Benton, tall and dark, and, though young, of habitually solemn countenance.
 The daring splash of colour that was Robbie caught his eye as she climbed the road on the opposite bank, and paused at the door of his office.

"H'm," he thought grimly, "Miss Cameron, I presume. I had hoped from her letter that she would be well—elderly. Not so obstru-sive, either," he added aloud in a rather explosive tone. Straight ahead across the high white bridge he came—no digressions for Paul Benton. How fiercely he hated that sparkling little stream!
 Arriving at his office, he courteously introduced himself and ushered
 Robbie inside.

"H'm," he thought grimly, "Miss Cameron, I presume. I had hoped
 from her letter that she would be well—elderly. Not so obstru-sive, either," he added aloud in a rather explosive tone. Straight ahead across the high white bridge he came—no digressions for Paul Benton. How fiercely he hated that sparkling little stream! Arriving at his office, he courteously introduced himself and ushered Robbie inside.

"Well, Miss Cameron," he began in crisp, business-like tones, "you had splendid credentials from Campbell and Cameron, of Edinburgh. I wonder you did not seek an appointment in the city." "Oh, no! Mr. Benton; that would not have appealed to me. I have been longing to get into the country," she replied.

The softly-spoken words, with the delicate twist that her recent lent them, caused Paul Benton to look at her more attentively, and he thought, "I should not have used the word 'obstrusive'; that certainly does not apply—and she is, perhaps, a little older than I thought."

Aloud, he said, "Your name, Miss Cameron—were you by any chance related to the firm you worked with?"

"Yes," answered Robbie; "my uncle was the junior partner. He fled just before I left home, the last of my near kith and kin."

"I see," was the terse response.
 Then, after a pause, "Well, I hope you will not find life too dull in this sleepy little town. At all events, your time here in the office will be fully occupied for some weeks. There is a great deal of work ahead unravelling the tangle your predecessor has left—you will find she was far from competent."

Robbie heartily endorsed his words before the week was out, but as she had a natural liking for all legal problems, she found enjoyment in her work. Moreover, she quickly made friends, both young and old, her vivid personality and evident refinement winning her an entrée into the social life of the town. But at no function, either public or private, did Robbie ever see her employer.

She often looked at him quizzically, seated at his office table, all his attention centred on his work, and felt perhaps a touch of pique that she should be treated so consistently as little more than an article of furniture; or as the merest cog in the machinery of his profession.
 "Sober-sided," she mentally pictured him. "You take yourself and life too seriously. It is a form of godliness in one so young."

And then, one evening, over a game of cards, Robbie heard Paul Benton's story. Bluff, old Dr.
 Woods, in whose house she was passing the evening, tensely asked her had she yet lured her employer into her net. A flush crept into Robbie's cheeks, at sight of which he chuckled in triumph. This so goaded Robbie that she replied:
 "No, crusty old bachelors are not for me!" And then, with an implish twinkle, looked up from under her long eyelashes, to note the effect on the "old bachelor" before her. The Doctor's sister, grey-eyed and gentle, and her daughter Merle, broke into a merry laugh at his discomfiture, and his sister said, "You deserved that richly, brother James—now I hope you will not tease my Robbie again."

Then, turning to the girl, she continued, "And yet I feel that I want to champion Paul. Robbie dear, you must not think of him as a 'crusty old bachelor,' as I will tell you his story. It is strange that in this little town you have not heard it long ago."

"After his college and University days were over, Paul returned to Sleepy Hollow and found himself with enthusiasm into the profession his father had followed before him, bringing to it the vim and vitality of youth. So that, before the old gentleman died, the practice was on a sounder footing than ever it would have been, had Paul the younger's influence not been there.
 Tall and dark as he is, for his fadylove he chose Fay Wilcox, of 'Woodbine' Station, dainty and fair, and, oh, so sweet! To see her was to love her, Robbie; and I cannot tell you this story without a deep heartache for the sadness of it. They had been playing tennis together one holiday in June, and were to be married in September.
 They were walking briskly home in the frosty evening to where Paul's mother had tea awaiting them by a cosy fire in her home on the hill.
 You know the Benton home, Robbie, don't you? It is just beyond Mrs.
 Arnold's boarding-house, an old grey stone building, set well back among tall pines."

"Yes, I know it," said Robbie; "a very homey home."

"Our little mountain creek was a frenzied torrent that season, fed not only by the snow on the heights, but by a series of fierce rainstorms.
 Paul and Fay were crossing down below the main bridge, taking a short cut home by the stock bridge, which was still considered safe, although the water was swirling within two feet of the planking.
 The winter dusk was falling, and as they stepped on to the bridge they did not notice a great heavy tree-trunk sweeping downstream towards them. It cannoned into the old unsteady woodwork with such force that the planking gave way, and they were hurled into the angry waters. The log must have crashed into poor little Fay, for she sank almost immediately, and though Paul struggled wildly, against the

The Perfect Bust

Lovely Materials For New Corsettes

THIS year as never before you need a perfect bust. Have you looked at the new necklines? For evening wear they do not come anywhere near your neck. You will not know yourself when you see yourself in one of these new corsettes. They are made in the loveliest materials—heavy silks and sheer silks, gauzes and lace and very little elastic. As little as possible, in fact, because if you want your figure controlled you need something that will not give too easily. Curves too often win arguments with elastic.

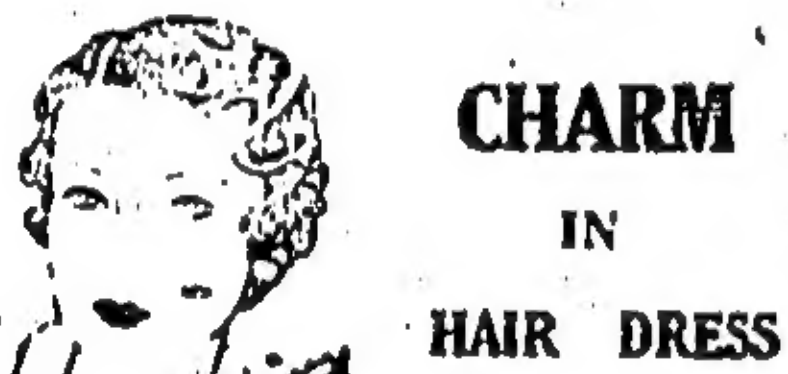

However, these corsettes are not too stiff to be comfortable and are safe from a medical point of view. They are obtainable in all sorts of lovely soft shades, and when you wear them with pantlines to match you look so nice you will not want to put your dress on.

PRACTICAL COAT

Copyright, 1934, by Fairchild
The boxy coat of seven-eighths length illustrated here features square-cut collar, the high buttoned closing and bell sleeve are characteristic details.

THE "COIFFURE A LA TITUS"

Pads Look Fashionable

THE hairdressing which the "coiffure a la Titus" sought to out was complicated. Women wore rolls and curls all over the crown of their heads, many hair ornaments, forehead curls, and two long curls behind as well as one or two down the middle of the back, lying on the shoulders. This last part of the coiffure was distinct from the fashion— which— laid a single— long ringlet to the front on one side of the neck.

Although it might consist of two curls, these were joined or bound together into a single feature that was known as the Catogan. The Catogan had the great advantage that, if you had not enough hair to run to one after all the business on top, you could easily add a bought one, and the majority of women, young and old, did this. There was a huge trade in human hair in those days. Now it is not nearly so good.

Pads (or "frisettes," as they were called) were also practical necessities if one wanted to look fashionable. They helped to keep everything together and to prevent— sometimes— untidiness.

A TAILORED LOOK FOR NOON AND NIGHT

BLACK or dark crepe sometimes has a couple of broad straight pleats down the front of the skirt which give it a tailored look. Above this a broad ornamental white bib and full white under-sleeves help to combine the worlds of plain and decorated. The use of metal in dresses of this kind adds a luxurious note, without, seemingly, interfering with simplicity. White bibs, for instance, may be edged with gold sequins and over-sleeves be trimmed with them. The woollen and other stuffs which are slightly shot with metal are so decorative in themselves that they can be made up almost on tailored lines to serve for afternoon or evening.

THE NEW "UNDERNEATHS"

THE new "underneath" are not only lovely, but cunningly put together so that you get the maximum amount of fit for the minimum amount of seams. And the materials and laces are heavenly.

Some lingerie experts value pure line so much that their garments are designed without any trimmings. They do not need it. The beauty of the workmanship does all that is necessary.

UNCRUNSHABLE BLACK VELVET TUNIC

Next Year's Silhouette

LONDON.
HAVING made yourself as lovely as possible, you really must complete the ensemble by putting on a lovely frock outside. At one of the recent fashion shows there was demonstrated a long black velvet skirt with two tunic lines.

One tunic was of black velvet, uncrushable, of course, cut with a draped neck, long bishop sleeves and a little fullness at the knees. For the other, white satin with a faint silver tracery like swallow's wings; this had a square cut décolletage and was sleeveless.

Another gown gave an inkling of the 1935 silhouette— with a loose tucker of the square décolletage, a stark outlining of the figure and a great flare round the knees ending on the floor at the back in a fish tail train.

The material used for this model— a satin-faced duvetyn, the satin side used for the straight petticoat which ellings to the feet as the duvetyn is inside. The colour— a heavenly shade which the designer calls "Stratosphere."

AFTERNOON FROCK A NECESSITY

THE afternoon dress is at once a necessity and a difficulty. While certain periods of the day are definitely covered by a sports frock or suit, or by an evening frock, the afternoon is comprehensive in character and at one extreme overlaps into sports clothes and at the other into evening frocks. Thus while a smartly cut woollen frock may be perfectly suited for the sports end of the scale, it is wrong as soon as days begin to close in and rooms grow hot. Equally, the satin or crepe dress, which can be worn on the evenings on occasion, is not suitable for lunch, unless made severely to conform by means of a coat. When one speaks, therefore, of the afternoon frock one really means a trinity of frocks which only the greatest good management can combine in one.

Oil Silk For Novelties

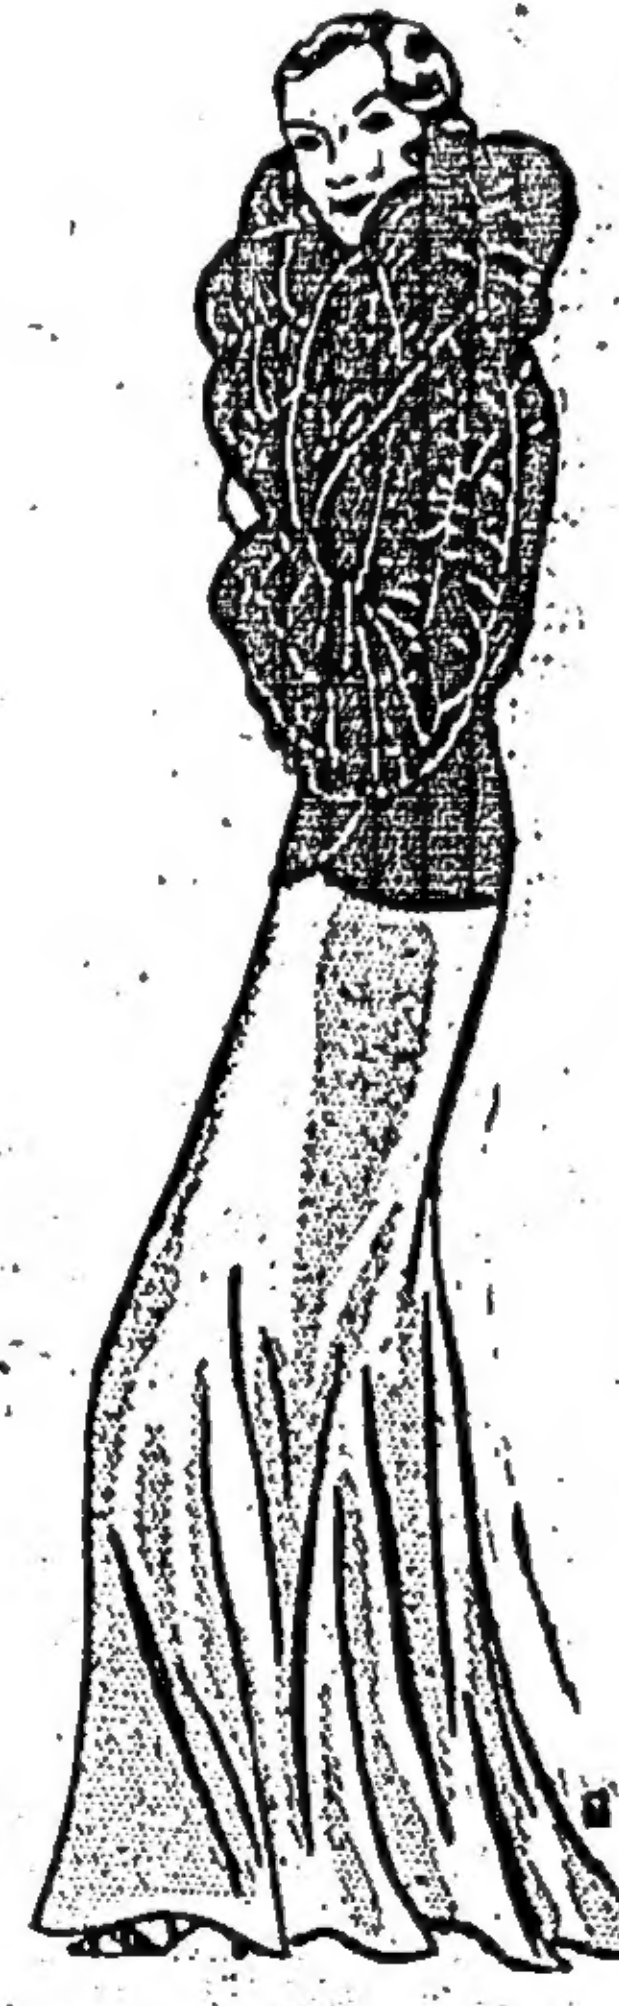

TOP BODICES

THE tops of bodices often have a small V necks and the shoulders slope away as did those of the Victorians. Sometimes a slanting yoke rather deep on the shoulders has the bodice gathered into it, and sometimes are gathered in at the wrist and sometimes left widely open. Bodices have the old Victorian V from the shoulders almost to the waist filled in with material and then button straight down the front. All these wide, loose bodices are worn with slim, straight skirts. Buttons at the back are the sole decoration.

WHITE PATCHES RELIEVE WINTER FROCKS

A SMALL square neck, reaching to the base of the throat, might develop into a square white inset reaching almost to the broad belt. Or a round at the base of the neck might be broken by a waterfall of white or fluting of white, standing on its edge under the chin, as though it were ribbon looped. White patches everywhere relieve the winter afternoon frock. If there is a deep rectangular inset in front, rather like a shirt bosom, it is often divided into two sections by means of the bodice which buttons all up the front. This sort of dress reaches to just above the ankle, and is convenient and at the same time ceremonial in appearance.

Some Afternoon Frocks

ROUGHNESS EXAGGERATION

PARIS.
A LELONG dress seen recently was of navy wool, buttoning down the front, was lent its air of sophistication by means of the white grosgrain neckpiece and cuffs, both of which carry on the buttoned idea. With the Suzy hat, a sort of cross between a beret and a marquis hat, it is perfectly suited for lunch and onwards through the afternoon. The surface roughness of the material, combined with the rich white of the fittings, makes that sort of contrast which is effective because it looks simple but is not.

It should be noted, further, that the only exaggeration is this very roughness and that, in contradiction to many head-dresses, the hair is severe and neat and the hat the reverse of many of the fantasies worn as being fashionable. About ten-time this kind of dress would begin to look and feel hot. Its place would then be taken by another which could also have been worn at lunch-time.

The next kind of afternoon frock would be suitable for a well-dressed luncheon and one to which the wearer would go without any preliminary morning avocations. This would be either a tunic dress or one perhaps with a narrow, slightly slashed skirt, both or either being made of velvet, cloque, thick silk crepe, or satin. The material marks the differences acutely. The velvet or velveteen frock with a tunic which looks almost like a double skirt would make for extreme slimness in the skirt, emphasising this by means of huge armholes with correspondingly big sleeves.

MAKES EXCELLENT COVERS

OILED silk, now to be had both in good plain shades and in bright patterns, may easily be made up into useful and attractive novelties suitable for sales of work or for presents. For cockery books, or for any reference books that are in constant use, loose covers of oiled-silk are excellent. Sponage-bags and handy little cases of different kinds, for home or holiday use, may be made from it.

Another serviceable device is a cover on which vases may be placed while flowers are being arranged in them. For this cover a piece of oiled silk of suitable size should be finished with bias binding and to one corner a pair of stainless scissors should be attached by a length of cord or ribbon. When not in use the cover is rolled up with the scissors inside.

THE "REDINGOTE"

Difference Between 1933 and 1934 Coats

BOTH fur coats and woollen coats, whether fur-trimmed or not, are in considerable amount of variety this autumn, but there are certain outstanding details which are comparatively constant.

One is that if you have a full-length coat it will almost certainly be belted. The only exception to this is the "redingote," which is part of the definite director's feeling of the moment. All full-length coats tend to outline the figure neatly, whether belted or not, and give a long, straight line to the silhouette even when they have actually plenty of wrap-over in the skirt.

Another difference between 1933 and 1934 coats is the softer and rounder shoulder line, and a lack of that desire to fuss with the sleeve which pervaded so many designs last year.

A third point concerns the collar treatment. Whether these are of fur or not, most of them tend to stand away from and frame the face. There is not nearly so much of that muffled throat effect, although as many dresses and jumpers still go in for high necklines and scarves increase in ingenuity and charm, there is no reason to fear a shivery feeling when the weather gets cold.

LONG AND SHORT HAIR

COIFFURE TO WEAR WITH EVENING DRESSES

LONDON.
THE battle of long versus short hair is ending in a compromise. A leading hairdresser is featuring a new coiffure, which, while shingled at the nape of the neck, has longer hair above. The hair is scraped back off the ears, and the ends are tightly curled.

Instead of the "bang" beloved of our grandmothers, which completely hid the forehead, a curled crest like a cockatoo's leaves the forehead bare except for a few escaping ringlets.

This coiffure is specially designed to wear with the new full, stiff-skirted evening dresses, and is in keeping with the fashionable sloping shoulders, pork-pie hats, and shoulder capes.

CURTAIN RODS

DURING spring-cleaning curtains and rods are usually taken down for cleaning. When they are put up again it is a good plan to smear a little oil over the rods. If this is carried out there will never be any trouble with rings which stick. They will run smoothly over the rod, and, additionally, the oil will do much to prevent any rusting. When shortening or lengthening net curtains, pins will not stay in the net. It is a good plan to substitute tiny wire hairpins. If the hem is secured with these first it will be kept firm and straight for sewing.

SENSATIONAL ARMY TRIUMPH OVER CHINESE IN LAI WAH CUP

CLUB BEAT ARMY IN RUGBY ENCOUNTER

McGILCHRIST & GRIFFITHS SEEN AT THEIR BEST

BORDERER FORWARDS IN ACTION

A MUCH IMPROVED ARMY RUGBY FIFTEEN WAS BEATEN BY THE CLUB YESTERDAY, THE LATTER VERY NEARLY REPEATING THEIR OVERWHELMING SUCCESS OF A FORTNIGHT AGO BY A SCORE OF FIVE GOALS AND THREE TRIES (31 POINTS) TO A TRY AND A PENALTY GOAL (6 POINTS) AT SOOKUNPOO.

McGilchrist and Griffiths played at the top of their form throughout the encounter, the former crossing the Army line on three occasions, twice in the first half, brilliant handling and clever running being the feature of his play.

Griffiths surprised with terrific bursts of speed, his swerve often leaving the Army defences spread-eagled.

Robertson and Riggs formed a very effective partnership on the right wing and were seen in several pretty bouts of passing. Meeke and Turner shone on occasion, the former being caught on several instances trying to break through on his own. Turner handled well and scored a very good try in the first half when he sold the dummy to swerve past Kelly and ground between the posts.

The Club pack started very shakily and were not accumulating at all well in the opening half, in spite of Bradford's repeated entreaties. The latter worked like a trojan and was responsible for blocking several promising movements by the Army forwards by dropping on the ball.

Prominent Club Forwards
Castleton, Bramble, and Cumming were conspicuous throughout in the loose, while Cumming and Bramble shone on occasion in the lineouts.

The Army pack was very much strengthened by the inclusion of Hardy and Gilmore, the Borderers, and by Barry, Morgan, and Armstrong of the Fusiliers.

In the opening half the Army were heeling much better than their opponents, but faulty handling among the backs lost them many scoring possibilities.

In the second half the Army eight packed too high and were pushed all over the field. In the loose, however, they were splendid and gained as much as half the field in some of their rushes.

In defence Kelly was safe and kicked a good length ball, but he was no match in speed for the Club three-quarters. Floyd and Muspratt-Williams formed an effective pair on the right wing, but the latter's handling was not too good in the second half when he dropped several passes.

Metcalf Catches Eye
Metcalf was decidedly good and lent considerable weight among the backs, tackling hard and kicking well. Hubbard played a hard game.

Pat Triumphs In "A" Class

TOYNETTE'S SUCCESS

In the first Corinthian race for "A," "H" and "G" Class racing yachts, held yesterday by the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club over a course of 8.1 miles, Pat, sailed by Commodore Frank Elliott, R.N., crossed the line in the "A" Class ahead of 10 other competitors, while Ariel, with Mr. E. G. Lee at the tiller, beat five other yachts for the "H" Class prize.

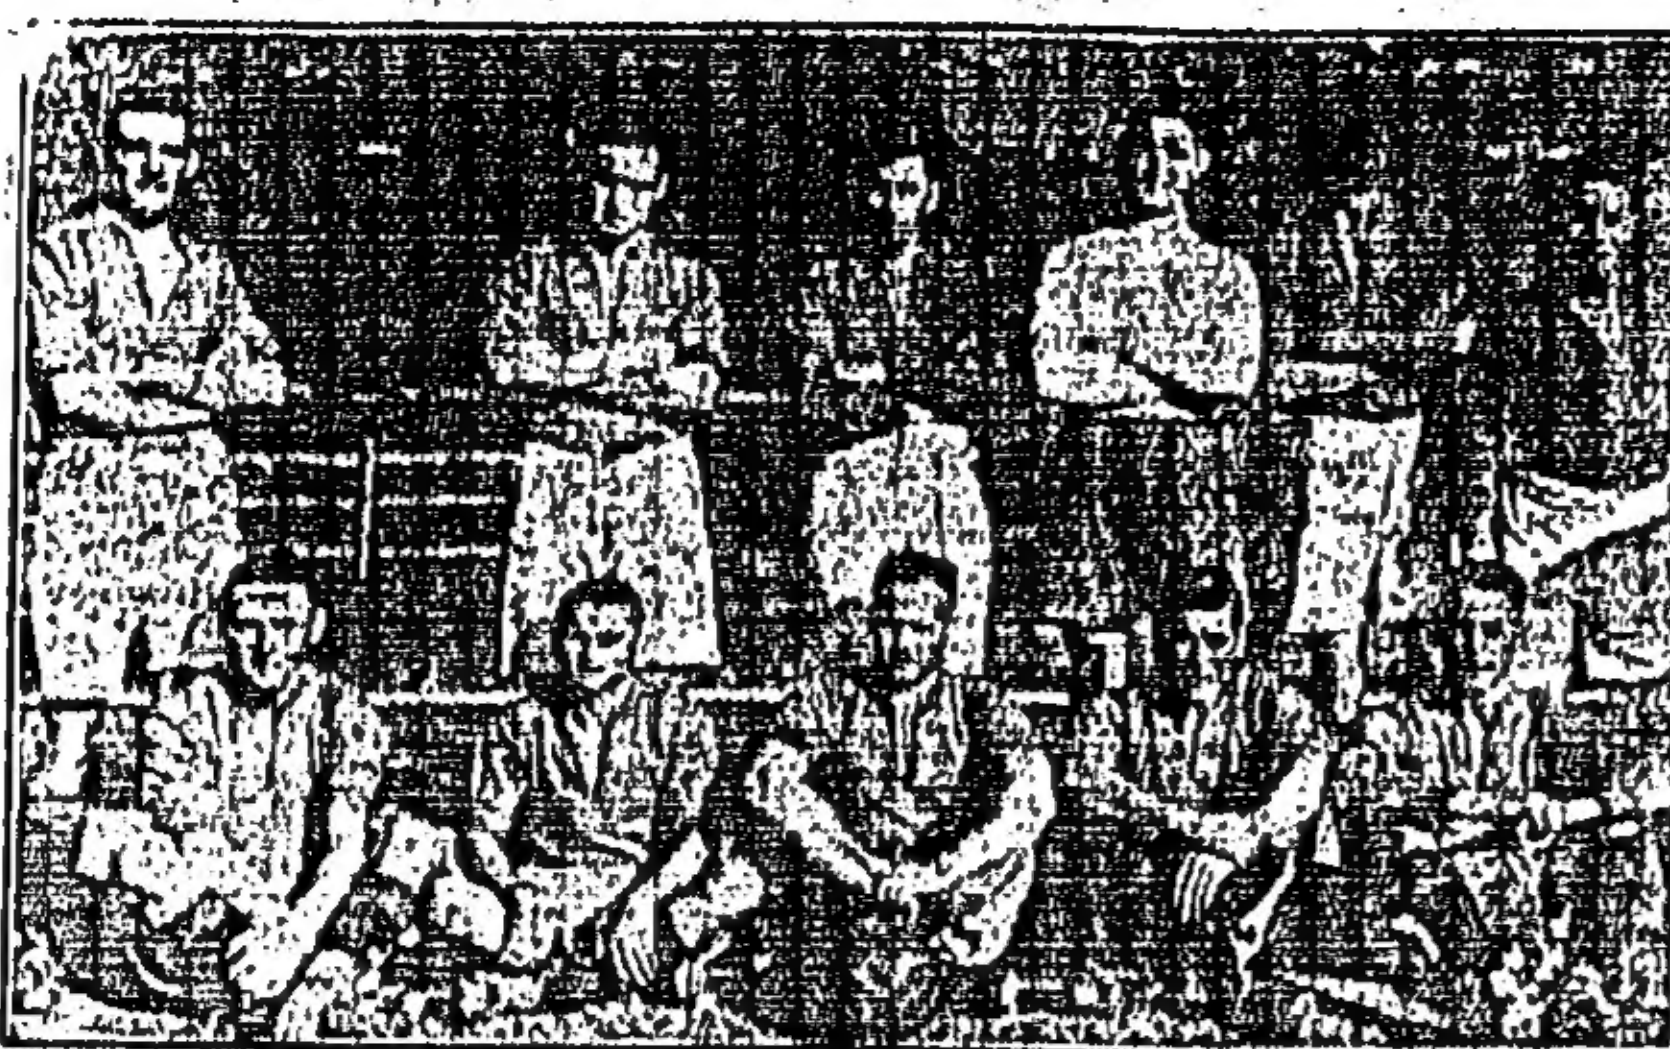

Toynette, with Captain W. J. Fennell at the helm, crossed the line ahead of six other boats in the "G" Class.

Only three out of the six boats completed the course in the "H" and "Y" Classes of the Monargie Race, which was won by Advanac, sailed by Major Kennedy.

Yesterday's results were—

HUNG AND MISS GRIFFITHS WIN IN MIXED DOUBLES

Easy Success Recorded Over Ravenhill And Mrs. Conder

W. C. Hung and Miss M. Griffiths, the Kowloon Cricket Club pair, entered the Second Round of the Colony Mixed Doubles Lawn Tennis Championship when they beat Lt. Ravenhill and Mrs. Conder, a U.S.R.C. combination, by 6-3, 6-4 at the Chinese Recreation Club on Friday.

Winning by a much easier margin than the score would suggest the K.C.C. pair will now meet the winners of the tie between Mr. and Mrs. Kayll and H. D. Tollyington and Mrs. Parkes.

LOSERS SLACKEN THEIR PACE

C.B.A.'S THIRD WIN

After a goalless first half, the Central British Association Ladies defeated the Recreio Ladies by 2 goals to nil in their Caer Clark hockey encounter at King's Park, yesterday.

The goals were scored in the last fifteen minutes of the game by Miss Whitley and Miss Woolley.

During the first half, the game was very evenly contested, the Recreio's brilliant work in defence being outstanding. Only on one occasion were the Recreio forwards dangerous, and on that occasion they were pulled up for off-side.

SCHOOLGIRLS LOSE TO H.K. LADIES

Caer Clark Win For Champions

ALL FORWARDS SCORE GOALS

The Central British Schoolgirls were overwhelmed by the Hong Kong Ladies in their Caer Clark Cup fixture at Sookunpoo yesterday, losing by seven clear goals.

The Schoolgirls had a very poor defence, the two backs, Miss Lamert and Miss Stephenson, lying much too far forward to be able to stop any sudden attack.

The Hong Kong Ladies' forwards combined excellently, but had very little opposition to contend with.

Scratch H.K. Ladies Team Lose 9 to 0

A Hong Kong Ladies' hockey team was routed by the "Y" Ladies at King's Park yesterday, when the latter won by nine clear goals, displaying superiority in all departments of the game.

The "Y" defence was never tested during any stage of the game, the Hong Kong Ladies being hampered in their own half of the field throughout the encounter.

Miss P. McCaw, (8), Miss S. Dalziel (3), Miss O. Brown (2) and Miss L. Hickey scored the goals.

MORRISON'S PLAY IN DEFENCE FEATURE

CIVILIANS' RECOVERY AGAINST NAVY

HASSAN FRACTURES LEG

DISPLAYING superiority at forward and backed up by a brilliant defence, the Army caused a sensational upset in their semi-final Lai Wah Cup encounter against the Combined Chinese yesterday on the Club ground, leaving the field winners by the odd goal in three after leading by two clear goals at the interval.

At Kowloon the Navy also caused a minor sensation when they led the Civilians by two clear goals at the interval in the other semi-final, but the Civilians staged a remarkable comeback in the second half, thanks to the brilliant display of the Gosano brothers, who between them scored three of the four goals netted by the Civilians in the second half and which gave them victory.

IN THE OPENING MINUTES OF THE GAME BETWEEN THE RADIO AND THE POLICE IN THE THIRD DIVISION, M. H. HASSAN, THE RADIO CENTRE-HALF, WAS CARRIED OFF THE FIELD SUFFERING FROM A FRACTURED LEG—HE WAS TO HAVE PLAYED IN TO-DAY'S HOCKEY TRIAL—AND IN HIS ABSENCE THE POLICE SECURED TWO SURPRISE POINTS.

CIVILIANS RALLY WELL TO WIN 4 TO 2

Navy Dominance Nullified

GOSANO BROTHERS PRIME MOVERS IN ATTACK

After being two goals in arrears, the Civilians completely turned the tables on the Royal Navy at Kowloon yesterday when they qualified to enter the Final by 4 goals to 2.

The Civilians were lucky to win—had the Navy maintained the form they displayed during the first half, they would have won by a decisive margin. The Navy enjoyed three-quarters of the play, while during the first half they were rarely outside the Civilians' area.

The game, on the whole, was quite good, and the spectators had their money's worth, but both sides showed signs of weariness towards the end—no doubt playing for the unaccustomed 90 minutes had a great deal to do with the Navy's defeat, for they became very listless in the closing stages of the game.

The Civilians made one change in the team published. Poter Hunt, of the Club, did not play, and Parker, Beltrac, and Brooks comprised the re-arranged half-back line.

Forwards In Limelight

The Civilians were very well served in the forward line, in fact, the forwards and Beltrac were the stars of the team. The selection committee's speculative choice of Bickford to partner Ernie Strange on the left-wing came off favourably—this was Bickford's first appearance on the football field since his return from leave, and his present form was consequently a matter for conjecture. He was by no means the Bickford of last season—he was very speedy, he was clever, and his centres were good, but some of the attempts he made at scoring were lacking in judgment—he shot wide on two or three occasions and also ballooned the ball over the top.

Ernie Strange played a good game. On form this season it was doubtful whether he was the man for the inside position yesterday, but he played his best game this season to dispel any doubts.

"Y" LADIES TO BE STRENGTHENED

Miss E. Thomson Due Back To-day

Miss E. Thomson, the "Y" Ladies' hockey, centre-half, returns from home to-day by the Blue Funnel liner, s.s. "Antenor."

Miss Thomson's return to the "Y" Ladies' hockey team in the pivotal position, will result in changes in the attack, which will tend to add more thrust.

ARMY'S WIN OVER CHINESE IN LAI WAH CUP CLASH

Brilliant Defence Wins Game

MORRISON HOLDS TAM-WONG COMBINE EFFECTIVELY

Contrary to all expectations, the Army defeated the Combined Chinese by the odd goal in three in a gruelling 90-minute encounter in the semi-final round of the Lai Wah Cup knock-out competition. They will now meet the holders, the Civilians, in the Final, which takes place on the Club ground, on March 30.

The brilliant Army defence, together with their fast and bustling attack, were primarily responsible for the Chinese defeat. The latter, however, showed patches of their brilliant match-winning form, but they were playing up against a superior defence and went down with colours flying.

Despite the fact that the Combined Chinese comprised the South China "A" team, and had the advantage of a sound knowledge of each other's play, the Army outshone them in the opening period of the game in combined movements.

In the opening half the Army completely outshone the Chinese in all branches of the game, but it was the defence which brought victory to them. As a unit, the Army backs were the best on the field, but, individually, Morrison played the most valuable game on either side.

Morrison Shines

Seemingly gifted with second sight, it was Morrison who appeared at the critical moment to block a dangerous effort from the over-present Tam, or again from Wong Mee-shun and even on occasion smothered outbreaks from as far over as Ip Pak-wa on the left wing. His tackled first-time, and considered no movement too small to be ignored.

Swaine was also seen at his best. The Wong Mee-shun and Ip Pak-wa combine found great difficulty in negotiating him, and by reason of his consistency the Chinese were hampered to a great extent in their forward movements.

To round off an effective defensive line, Durham produced brilliant form between the sticks. Shots from every angle were nothing to him, and his full-length saves became a commonplace feature before the end.

Tam And Wong Featured

Outstanding among the Chinese team were Tam Kong-pak and Wong Mee-shun, who, by reason of the invigorated opposing defence, were called upon to excel in their efforts to pierce the Army goal. That quite a number of their tries went as far as the Army goal-keeper, speaks volumes on their behalf, but it was in their approach movements that they were really seen at the top of their form. Without the assistance of Fung King-cheung, who held too far back to be of any great aid, Wong and Tam were the instigators of the greater portion of the major their friendly cricket fixture.

ARTHUR LAY'S 100, scored out of 161 in 80 minutes against the Navy — the first premier league century of the season — provided the feature of the league cricket programme yesterday.
In a chanceless innings he hit 16 boundaries and assisted E. C.
Fincher (60) to add 147 for the K.C.C.'s first wicket. The next six batsmen, however, added only 43 runs and the Navy, requiring 34 to win with two wickets in hand when stumps were drawn, forced a draw.

The Recreio failed to live up to their earlier promise and were exceedingly fortunate to escape off defeat against Craighengower who delayed their declaration too late. In this game F. R. Zimmern scored 93 out of 129, hitting 12 boundaries. A. P. Pereira distinguished himself by taking 6 for 37 against the visitors, while U. M. Omar made a welcome comeback with 6 for 21.

Had M. R. Abbas been able to survive the last two balls of the match the I.R.C. would have drawn, but, as it was, he was clean bowled first ball by Cpl. Ballard and the Army won by 26 runs.

Capt. Manners's 93 for the Navy against the K.C.C. was the feature of the junior league games — he hit no fewer than 15 boundaries and a six — but the game was left drawn. The Police, aided by a 153 first wicket stand between W. Meadows and J.
Hunter, trounced the Engineers, and Craighengower accounted for the Recreio in the other game.

PARTNERSHIP

Holland-Martin Injured
At King's Park

BRAMWELL'S GOOD DISPLAY

A. T. Lay and E. C. Fincher were in great batting form at King's Park yesterday, sending up the century in 47 minutes, and, in all, adding 147 in 67 minutes for the K.C.C.'s first wicket against the Navy. Nevertheless, the match was left drawn, though very much in favour of the visitors.

Lt. Holland-Martin, who kept wicket perfectly for the Navy, was forced to leave the field to have a gash on his chin attended to. He later returned to the field, after having been to the Kowloon Hospital. But for a regrettable misunderstanding, when batting with Pay-Comdr. Hargreaves, he might quite easily have won the game for the Navy, as he was well set when he was run out.

Lt. Bramwell, after being dropped badly by Burnett in the slips during Hung's second over, batted enterprisingly, exploiting the hook shot with marked success. Har-greaves, though no stylist, collected 54 runs in a patient innings.

THE LOUISIANA "KINGFISH"

Senator Who Aspires To Be U.S. Dictator

The Stormy Progress Of Huey Pierce Long

(By HARRISON BROWN)

THE flood of Roosevelt's triumph has swept over the country, obliterating a few landmarks and leaving America to settle down to as much peace as she can ever get.
But in one State there will be little peace. Things will go on happening in Louisiana.

In almost every country there is at least one man who aspires to be a Dictator and boss the rest. The two oldest Republics have now fallen into line and produced such a self-styled phenomenon. France has her Colonel de la Rocque, the United States has Huey Pierce Long.

Americans have been laughing at Huey for a long time. (He is known universally by his first name, or his favourite nickname,
"The Kingfish.") Twelve years ago Huey Long was an unknown lawyer in the small Louisiana town of Shreveport. He was clever and ambitious, and suddenly he told his friends that he would become Governor of the State.

His friends smiled. In 1924 he tried for that office and failed. Huey has a lack of "cultural background," a very loud voice, and waves his arms like a windmill. The local aristocrats, who had always provided the State Governors, were shocked at his candidature. But they were still more shocked in 1928 when he won the office. To-day Huey sits at Washington as senior Senator from his State.

Huey Takes Affront
There was a time when he only made the New York headlines when he had a fight in a washroom or was chased out of some town by irate voters under a barrage of rotten eggs. And matters had been sizzling in the South for some time before the rest of the huge country noticed it. The sizzling began last January, when Long lost an election in New Orleans to Mayor Thomas S. Walsley. Accustomed for years to be political boss of the State, Huey took the affront badly.

In August he tried to capture the city by force of arms. Guardsmen marched into the city and machine gunners were posted in the vote registry office. The Courts protested and threatened to interfere with such scandalous use of the military for political purposes. There upon the Kingfish ordered his appointees.
State Governor Allen, to call a special session of the Legislature to legalise the scandal.

This was the session which created the sensation. The first echo came from the publication of a manifesto from eighteen members of the Louisiana House of Representatives. This document called Long a "spurious Hitler" and a "bullying, hypocritical swash-buckler." Its conclusion was widely quoted in America: "If the Legislature but an outfit that jumps at the crack of a whip in the hands of a damned crook."

A Farcial Session
The session was pure farce. A series of unprecedented measures was railroaded through both Houses by the "Longsters"; and within four days Huey Long was "legal" Dictator of the great State which lies at the mouth of the Mississippi.

He had thrown his old straw hat on a committee-room table and proceeding to draw from it in rapid succession the 27 Bills of his "pursuing" programme, each with just a few words of comment. Amongst the paper rabbits thus produced from the hat was a Bill to empower the Governor to use the National Guard in any manner he chose and to prohibit State Courts from interfering with such action.

Another Bill removes the ballot-boxes from the jurisdiction of local sheriffs and empowers the Governor to appoint two of the three members of all local election bodies. Still another enables the Governor to hire, at the public expense, an unlimited number of "election guards" at five dollars a day. Since such "guards" will have votes, this is a convenient way of buying a majority and at the same time ruining any community which in the future shows signs of opposing Huey Long.

Prior to this his moments of fame used to be followed by periods of relative silence. But to-day feeling runs high and shows no sign of subsiding. In some quarters murder is openly advocated as the only way to shake Louisiana free. Huey is taking no chances. His two State-paid bodyguards, Joe Messina and Paul Voltier, follow him about almost in lock-step.

The "Hitler" Of America

But in spite of the stories by the score, and in spite of abuse in which he is called everything from a mur-derer to a thief. Huey keeps right on. A year ago, when a French Senator returned to Paris and told his countrymen that Long might be the coming Hitler of the United States Americans jeered. Louisiana was just Louisiana the easy-going South, and its politicians were notorious. Its chief city, New Orleans, was more French and Spanish than American. It was a "wide-open" town where vice and gambling were still an open politicians' racket and where local government gave no account of its revenues.
New Orleans was a law unto itself, the world's largest producer of absinthe, a "banana city" of the distant south. Things could not happen so blatantly elsewhere.

To-day the laughed-at "clown" holds both State and city in a vice-like grip.

He is dictator of a territory more than three times the size of Switzerland. Although nominally a Democrat the Roosevelt Administration does not support him. The State Press is almost solidly against this "shirt-sleeved statesman." That description fits Hitler also. Huey replicates by threatening the Press with new "spite laws" involving exorbitant taxation of newspapers above a certain circulation.

State Finances Ruined Yet by no means everybody is anti-Long. About his political followers the Dictator is openly cynical, and boasts that he can "buy them all like so many sacks of potatoes." There are others who saw that his four-year term as Governor showed him to be a man of energy

WISE & OTHERWISE

AT THE OFFICE

"My salary is not what it should be, sir."
"I agree—but do you think you could live on it if it were?"

FAIR BARGAIN

"The revolutionists are showing a flag of truce. What is it they want?" asked his Excellency.
"They just wanted to know if they could exchange a couple of generals for a few tins of bully beef."

"INTO" IS THE WORD

If you don't believe that a woman can run a car into a garage just come along and have a look at the heap of bricks and tiles at the side of my house.

BITTER

Retreat

A man has been advertising for a retreat where he can feel cut off

SOLEMN THOUGHT

A music-hall song writer begins to believe in the scheme of things when he finds that "park" rhymes with "dark."

Q AND A

A woman centenarian says she wonders what would make the modern girl turn pale. My guess is soap and water.

Ga-Ga-Golf

A famous racing motorist has ter?"

"I should speak to father about it, because I told him particularly that I wanted a brother!"

Passing Thought
Friends have become to me Friends indeed.
For every new friend is A friend in need.

FREEDOM . . . LIBERTY
There is to be another great parade at Bunymede next year.
I read. Why not wait and get the Betting and Lotteries Bill signed there?

SWEET AND THIRTY

A woman gossip-writer says that thirty is a nice age for a woman.
It is, especially if she happens to be fifty.

CONSPICUOUS

"Blazing hotel escapes" states a headline. It should, however, be quite easily recognised.

I SEE

An experimenter says that mice will lap up beer greedily. So that's how it happened that there were three "blind" mice.

LUCKY

In the South Sea Islands a man shakes hands with himself when he meets his wife's relatives.
Here, of course, he shakes hands with himself when he doesn't.

Horrid Thought

The birth-rate in Scotland is declining so seriously that three or four generations hence there won't be enough Scots left for the joke-smiths to make jokes about.

EXTRA NOURISHMENT FOR GROWING CHILDREN

Klim is particularly good for growing children. It has a rich, natural flavour, a flavour which children like.
Moreover it contains the food elements which children must have—full cream, all the curds, whey, casein, enzymes and vitamins.

Klim is of unusual value to children who cannot or will not drink enough milk. Klim enables them to EAT milk.

Because it is dry, Klim can be added in increased quantities to such dishes as the children's cereal.

The nourishment of those foods can be increased as much as 100 per cent. in this simple way. This is possible with Klim because of its being practically devoid of moisture.

GIVE your children Klim, to-day.

COUNTERFEIT COIN HOARD

Chinese Caught While Carrying 250

MORE FOUND IN HOUSE

Charged with the possession of 250 counterfeit coins on Thursday, and 25 counterfeit coins on Friday, Lam Ming, unemployed, was sentenced to three months' hard labour on the first charge, and two months' hard labour, concurrently, on the second charge, by Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning.

Sergeant Goodwin, appearing for the prosecution, stated that defendant was arrested when leaving the Canton Steamship Wharf. The Police had received information. On being searched 200 counterfeit 10 cent pieces and 50 5 cents coins were found in his pockets.

Defendant's house in Apliu Street, Shumshui, was searched the next day and 25 counterfeit 10-cent pieces were discovered in a drawer in his room. Defendant pleaded guilty.

SMUGGLERS CAUGHT AT TSUN WAN

Revenue Officer Ends 3-Day Search

A three-day search, led by Revenue Officer A. W. Grimmit, in Hong Kong waters, resulted in the arrest of Lam Cho and Kwan Kam, two watchmen on board fishing junk, No. 61 H.W., in Tsun Wan Bay on Friday. The two men were charged before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning, with being in possession of 21,000 taels of raw opium.

Information was received of the smuggling activities some days ago and a search party was organised. When the officers boarded the junk, the opium was found concealed in three kerosene tins in the bottom of the vessel. The master of the junk, Lau Tak, had absconded. A fine of $5,000, in default 12 months' hard labour each, was imposed.

who "did things for the people." Amongst these things were the construction of 1500 miles of concrete roads and the enrolment of 79,000 illiterates in night schools.

As a result of this lavish spending Louisiana is financially ruined. Thousands of jobs have been created at public expense, and taxation has risen so high that industry is going elsewhere. Thanks to Huey the public debt of Louisiana has risen in six years from eleven million to over one hundred million dollars. His construction programme is now the subject of a Federal investigation.

But it is on the basis of his public works policy that Long seeks to extend his influence. There are already 3000 "clubs" of propaganda for his "Share the Wealth" plan, and Huey hopes to have one in every town in the country. He favours a law to limit incomes and property ownership, and proposes that the surplus expropriated should go to the United States Treasury for use in public works.

It is this threat to step across the Mississippi and carry this doctrine to the drought-ridden areas of the North-West which is causing head-shakings. Admittedly Huey must have a harder task elsewhere than he had at home. But he is elated by his success to date and the acquiescence of the people of Louisiana alarms social students elsewhere.

Nerves were in a Terrible Way — 'ASPRO' a Surprise

1 Garden Street, Middle Brighton, S.S.
15/12/32
Dear Sirs,
Last week I had 18 teeth out, and not being well my nerves were in a terrible way; in fact, I had to be taken home from the dentist. I went on for a couple of days in terrible pain with my head and eyes, due to my nerves, so I had to go to a doctor. On my way home I bought a packet of 'ASPRO'. I took three and laid down, and to my surprise I woke up feeling lovely. Now, if I feel a slight headache at all I fly to my 'ASPRO'. I think 'ASPRO' should be in every home. I could mention a few more facts where 'ASPRO' has done good in my home. Once tried, always used.

CARGO UNLOADING DISPUTE

Mr. Hamilton Delivers Written Judgment
 SHIPPING CONCERN FINED

A written judgment for the summons against Messrs. Ho Thong and Company was given by Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court yesterday morning.

The company was summoned recently for allowing the discharge of 745 bales of tobacco from the s.s. Hong Peng, which was chartered by them on September 30, into vessels not under control of the licence of a general bonded warehouse.

Mr. J. Barrow, Assistant Superintendent of the Imports and Exports department, was in charge of the prosecution, while Mr. Leo D'Almada, s.m., conducted the defence.

Before giving his decision Mr. Hamilton apologised for keeping the parties waiting so long.

The judgment was as follows: In this summons for a breach of the procedure laid down in Section 17 Sub-section of Ordinance 39 of 1931, the facts are not in dispute and no evidence for the defence has been called. Here are certain branches of Mr. D'Almada's address which I deal with separately.

I first understood him to suggest that as this was an Ordinance drawn up for the protection of the revenue, and no attempt had been made to defraud the revenue, no offence had been committed. This seems to me to be expressly negated by the fact that Section 58 Sub-section 2 gives the Magistrate power to punish more heavily if he thinks the offence was intended to defraud the revenue. I admit the lack of intention is a factor of extenuation but not a ground of acquittal. Nor can mens rea come into the matter. The regulation existed and the defendants broke it. It was their legal duty to know it, ignorantia legis hand excusat, and if they broke it they must have committed an offence.

Extenuation Factor
 A further line was that of force majeure. But it has not been proved to me that the defendants could not have detained the ship though I agree that the early sailing was prudent. But here again I regard this as a factor in extenuation and not as a ground for acquittal. This, in my opinion, could only have been claimed had the defendants proved that they took every step possible either to comply, or to go as close to compliance as possible. But they did not do so. It has been shown that there are two courses they could, and in my opinion, should have taken, and which when taken, would have entitled them to acquittal.

They could have warned the Superintendent of the Import and Export office on the morning of Saturday, September 29 that there might be tobacco on board which would need instant removal, and got a provisional permit, (or if one had been refused they would have justified themselves in my eyes), or they could have followed the course described by Revenue Officer Powell.

"Their Business To Know"
 "If a ship comes in the Colony on a Sunday and the agents going on board find there is tobacco, the proper course is to ring up a bonded warehouse—the Kowloon Godown Company—China Provident or Butterfield and Swire to take delivery of the goods. They would be placed

WAR MANOEUVRES AT SINGAPORE BASE NOT SIGNIFICANT

Only Part Of Annual Training
 VOLUNTEERS PARTICIPATING

"There is no truth in the report appearing in the Singapore papers that the combined Navy, Army, and Air Force exercises, which take place on December 15 and 16, have any significance. It is just a part of the annual training of the units, and it so happens that two destroyer flotillas, an aircraft-carrier and a cruiser will be at Singapore when the exercises take place," was the information given the Sunday Herald yesterday morning by the naval authorities.

Every year the defences of various places in the Empire are tested by combined exercises between the Navy, Army, and Air Force, and the authorities have seen fit this year to take advantage of the fact that both the First and Eighth Destroyer Flotillas, the aircraft-carrier, Eagle, and the cruiser, Cumberland, will be at Singapore at the same time.

The exercises were originally fixed for December 13, but were changed to a week-end so that the Singapore Royal Naval Volunteer Reserves could take part.

The Army, Air Force and Volunteer Reserves will defend the island, while the Navy will form the attack.

The ships taking part are: H.M.S. Duncan, Flotilla Leader to the First Destroyer Flotilla, H.M.S. Decoy, Delight, Dainty, Duchess, Defender, Diamond, Diana, Daring, the Keppel, the leader of the Eighth Destroyer Flotilla, H.M.S. Verity, Veteran, Whitehall, Whitshed, Wildswan, Wishart, Witch and Wren, Eagle At Singapore

H.M.S. Cumberland, which is now en-route to Singapore, left Saigon yesterday, while the Eagle arrived at Singapore on Friday from a southern cruise.

in a steamer godown, which is open on a Sunday. This is an old established practise. I have even been called on a Sunday to open up the bonded warehouses to let the warehouse people take straight into bond."

Now, had they taken either of these courses they would, in my opinion, have been covered. But they did not attempt them, though the attempt alone would have excused them, and no argument of what might or might not subsequently have been possible can affect the case. As for knowing this, it was their business to know it. The situation obviously must be one likely to arise.

$25 Fine "Quite Enough"
 I am unable to follow Mr. D'Almada's contention about Sub-section 4 and 5 of the Regulations in the first schedule. I don't think I am entitled to assume that an Ordinance which has been passed and assented to contains a complete contradiction in two successive paragraphs unless no other reasonable explanation is forthcoming. In this case I adopt Mr. Barrow's view that Section 4 refers to "any goods" and Section 5 expressly refers to goods for which a permit has already been issued. I presume this is to avoid the retention of permits which might be used for more than one lot of goods. But the sections would seem to me rather alterius generis than ejusdem.

To sum up I consider that this summons has been proved and an offence committed, but I take the submissions of the defence as a very strong explanation in extenuation. I convict on summons A, and dismiss B and C. The maximum fine is $500, but I think a fine of $25 is quite enough.

OPIMUM HAUL AT KOWLOON

Chinese Tries To Evade Searchers

ALLEGES A "PLANT"

A fine of $165, in default three months' hard labour, was imposed on Ting Wong, a 30-year-old unemployed, who was charged before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday morning for having 5½ taels of raw opium in his possession at No. 28, Tai Nam Street.

The defendant pleaded not guilty stating that the Revenue Officers had brought the opium in from the street and accused him of owning it. Revenue officer W. G. Humphreys stated that at 6 p.m. on December 6 he went to the above address and knocked on the door. After a long wait, a small window near the door was opened and the defendant peeped out. He was then heard to run down the hall. Further knocking brought no response, so the raiding party went to the adjoining house and climbed across from one verandah to the other.

Before searching the house the revenue officers caught the defendant, who stated that he was a visitor to the floor. A search of the house was then made, revealing two packets of raw opium, one on the roof of the kitchen and one on the small verandah outside the rear cubicle. Inside the cubicle were a pair of scissors smeared with opium, a set of scales spotted with opium, rubber pads, for smuggling purposes and opium wrappers.

On being questioned, Chan Sau, the principle tenant of the floor, said that the cubicle had been rented to the defendant.

Defendant stated that the things belonged to another man who lived in the cubicle with him. Lau Kui, a Chinese revenue officer, called to the witness box, stated that there was no sign of another occupant. Also, there was only one bed.

POLICE OFFICER'S NIGHT OUT

Indian Discards Gun And Truncheon

DRUNK WHILE ON DUTY

A charge of misconduct was preferred against Harchand Singh, a constable of the Hong Kong Police Force, before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning. A fine of $100 was imposed.

Defendant pleaded guilty to the charge.

Mr. L. H. C. Calthrop, Assistant Superintendent of Police, appeared for the prosecution, said that on Friday evening the defendant was assigned to take duty outside the China Fleet Club, from 8 p.m. to midnight.

At about 9 o'clock accused was seen by Mr. F. G. Hill, Secretary of the China Fleet Club, inside the Club in an intoxicated condition. Mr. Hill immediately reported the matter to No. 2 Police Station, and Sub-Inspector Roger was sent to the Club.

Defendant had left before the arrival of Sub-Inspector Roger. He was found early in the morning on his way to the Central Police Station, still under the influence of liquor. His revolver, ammunition, cap, truncheon and torch-light were missing from his person. A search party went out to find the missing articles, which were later recovered at No. 58, Gloucester Road, the residence of Mrs. Lo Mul. The latter had reported her find to some sailors, who reported to the Police.

"It was fortunate that the revolver did not fall into undesirable hands," said Mr. Calthrop. Accused joined the Force in 1926, and had four previous charges in connection with drunkenness. He was departmentally dealt with previously.

Rough Weather Moderates

The N.Y.K. line s.s. Suwa Maru will arrive here at daylight to-morrow from Europe, and will sail for Shanghai and Japan at noon.

A wireless message from the vessel, on Thursday, stated that, owing to heavy seas and a strong current encountered after leaving Singapore, the ship would be delayed until Tuesday, but a message was received yesterday that the weather had moderated and that she would reach here to-morrow at daylight.

HONG KONG, SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1934.

The Peel Laboratory

THE opening of the new Engineering Laboratory by His Excellency the Governor, whose name will be commemorated by the building, is another step in the ambitious scheme of extension which will not be complete until the still larger central block has joined this wing to the Ho Tung Workshop. Hong Kong will then have the necessary outlet for the academic portion of the profession. All that remains to be done is to find the necessary "pious founder" or founders; and considering that China is the biggest field left waiting for the conquests of the Engineer, that ought not to be beyond quite early accomplishment. The taming of the great rivers such as the Yellow River; the enormous task of opening up the interior Provinces by roads fit for motor trolleys, with all the necessary bridges and the main railway connections; the vast amount of rebuilding needed to bring the housing conditions up to twentieth century standards all these things are the tasks of the immediate future. Whether the rate of development be fast or slow depends entirely on whether the necessary social and political conditions of peace and order can be obtained and maintained over a considerable period.

The casual globetrotter is unduly impressed by the millions of population, the vast acreage, the potentialities both in mineral exploitation and agricultural production. The practical man points out that the standard of living is so low, and the capital available for investment so lacking, that any expensive plan of improvement in China has to be rejected. The answer is that without provision of the needful transport and plant, which cannot be had without fairly large expenditure the standard of living will remain low. Are we to be content to allow things to remain at that deadlock? It is time for the situation to be faced and a useful programme mapped out; and it is to be hoped that the present conference at Canton will make a start. Any open minded study of the condition of China convinces an observer that the whole cause of the present discontent is poverty. We hear about Communism, but the fact is that the so-called Communists have nothing to share with each other, and would not be any richer if they called themselves individualists of ever so rugged a persuasion. The evil cannot be cured by military operations, which only teach large numbers of men how to take things by force. What is needed is to set them thinking about something else. Engineering development on a large scale is only done when a country has begun to want to develop itself, and what persuades people of the desirability of further works is the ocular evidence of the usefulness of what has been done in the first stages. China in several of the Provinces is already doing great work in road building; but so far as loans are concerned most of them have gone to pay soldiers, with no good result whatever, for large numbers of these men have not been fully paid, and have returned to their villages trained to arms disaffected to the Government, and discontented with any prospects that peace offers them.

The next generation being devoted to necessity to engineering development, the question arises for us, who is to train the skilled men required. Practically there are three alternative courses open. Either they will go to the United States, or to Japan, or to us. It will be necessary to go to one of the centres where engineering work is done on a large scale, and already there are a few studentships which have been very useful. The reports from the workshops in England where Chinese apprentices have been trained are very favourable; and as regards the use of machinery and the tending of it to avoid depreciation they are said to be much more naturally gifted than the Japanese. There need be no jealousy in the matter. There will be room for all. But any man trained in particular methods tends to prefer those methods and the style of machine produced by them. Competition is good, so long as it is competition in quality of output. But it would be a thousand pities if the English styles of workmanship should not be represented and understood. The early execution of great engineering works in other lands was almost entirely in English hands; but our old supremacy will have to be regained by strenuous and well-directed effort if it is to be regained at all; and even our present share of work can only be kept by the same means. In productive work there is no real difference of interests. The prosperity of one nation is good for all, and the Peel Laboratory may be an open door to many careers of great usefulness.

LADY PRECIOUS STREAM

It is certainly a sign of the times that a Chinese play should be produced in London and be received not only with the acclamation of critics but with the more solid regard of a long and successful run. For this result the special qualifications of Mr. S. I. Hsiung are responsible, for he not only translated the book of the words but recast it into a form in which it could have its proper effect with a Western audience and then superintended the stage production itself. But there is no reason to suppose that Mr. Hsiung has a monopoly of the talent needed for the purpose or that "Lady Precious Stream" is in any way unique in its appeal. The fact is that both in China and Japan there are many traditional themes that would bear the translation as well or better. It is a question of conventions. In this play, which has been published in book form and can be bought locally, the original fairy story has been taken hold of by a writer who understood how to express the substance in a new convention, as no literal translation could do. The Oriental theatre is based on an acceptance of the old saying that "time is made for slaves," and it is only natural that a spectator who comes to his seat after a late dinner and expects to catch a suburban train home begins to wonder why the actors do not get a move on. A very close analogy could be drawn with the Greek plays through which we of the older generation struggled line by line in the days of our youth. There was lots of time to appreciate the significance of a situation without any eagerness to go on to the next scene, for we knew beforehand what was going to be the end, having had to acquaint ourselves with dear old "Lempriere" in a much more junior form. The whole of the attention could be given to the poetry expressed by the actors in such well chosen words. In a gala performance by any of the famous companies in China or Japan we can have the same pleasure. The company has got beautifully posed in harmonious costumes, and it would be rude not to sit and enjoy the grouping for twenty minutes or so during a long monologue. In "Lady Precious Stream" the situations are so quaint in themselves, and the action of everybody is so inconsequent that we are left free to enjoy the airy wit.

It has long been one of my convictions that if the Shanghai Cinema producers would only get a competent European stage manager to recast their stories as Mr. Hsiung could do, they would reap a harvest from the new curiosity about the Orient and the wish to have something different from all the well work plots which can be guessed from the first reel, and sometimes from the mere title.

Now that we have finished throwing out hats in the air and congratulating the Dutch, how about R101 in 1930 Great Britain has ignored airships. Now, in the light of the new changes, is the time to decide whether to build them again or ignore them for ever. SENOR FERNANDO ALEGRE

This is the nineteenth of the exclusive "Sunday Herald" series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Konyo, the talented Hungarian artist.

SENOR Fernando Alegre, Consul-General for the Republic of Panama at Hong Kong, enjoys the distinction of being the youngest Consul in the Colony. He is only 34 years of age. Senor Alegre, who arrived in Hong Kong on June 1 last year, received the latter part of his education at the National Institute of Panama, leaving there in 1919 to take a course in English at the Canal Zone School, Balboa. Having mastered the language, he commenced his business career with Messrs. Armours, the celebrated meat-packers of Chicago, and later served with the All-American Cable Company and the Gulf Oil Company. With these concerns he became a proficient accountant, a following which was to prove a great factor in his life.

The Ping Shan District

THE afternoon of Saturday the first of December was spent in the Ping Shan district about 24 miles from Kowloon beyond Castle Peak. This district is a good one for birds as it includes a variety of scenery, — woods of old trees in the vicinity of the villages of Ping Shan and Sun Wai, grass and scrub covered slopes, paddy fields, and tidal streams draining into Deep Bay. It is therefore possible to see many species of birds in the course of an afternoon in this range of country. The weather was decidedly cold though sunny and fast walking was essential to keep warm.

The walk was notable for two reasons, firstly the large number of species identified namely 38 and secondly for the odd sequence of events. Thirty-eight is our record for one afternoon (in the past six years) and is really an amazing list when it is remembered that most people consider that the Colony is poor in birds. We hope, however, to better this list and to achieve the figure 40 some time this winter.

In a clump of tall bamboos near the commencement of the walk we saw and heard a number of the common Black-choked Laughing Thrush, or Babbler as it is more commonly called. On glancing behind the clump at its foot we saw a Babbler obviously in extremis. The bird was picked up and examined, no sign of injury could be seen and as there were a number of pigs in the immediate district it could not have been on the ground long. Animals usually hide when they feel death approach and this is one reason why dead birds are so rarely seen. This Babbler, though fully grown, was a young bird with its new winter plumage not yet fully developed.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE FUNCTIONS

Many Social Activities During Week

The social activities of His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., and Lady Peel, and the Government House functions for the week ending Saturday are shown in the following official communiqué issued from Government House, yesterday, December 2:—

His Excellency The Governor, attended by Captain Walter, was present at the annual St. Andrew's Service at the Union Church, Kennedy Road.

In the afternoon His Excellency, attended by Captain Walter, was the guest of Mr. W. J. Keswick at the opening Meet of the Fanling Hunt.

December 4:—

The following dined at Government House: Sir Victor Sasson, Bt., Captain and Mrs. G. B. Coltart, Captain A. R. Halford, Mr. G. W. Stoveson, and Mr. G. H. Potts.

December 5:—

His Excellency The Governor, attended by Mr. Filcher, witnessed the Annual Cricket Match between the Oxford and Cambridge Societies of Hong Kong.

December 6:—

His Excellency received Captain B. Brevoneal, Commanding the Italian Naval Forces, in the Far East.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lindell and Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Sayer dined at Government House, after which His Excellency The Governor accompanied by his guests and attended by the personal staff witnessed the performance of "Fresh Fields" by the Hong Kong Amateur Dramatic Club at the China Fleet Club Theatre.

December 7:—

In the afternoon, His Excellency, attended by Captain Walter, opened the new Peol Engineering Laboratory at the Hong Kong University.

The following dined at Govern-

We sat on a sunny bank and ate our titbit and whilst doing so saw the following birds, — a Kestrel hovering in the distance, two Chinese Black Drongos, hawklike insects and playing in the air, Tree Sparrows, Chinese and Red-necked Bulbuls, Tree Pigeons, Spotted-necked Doves, Streak-eyed and White-faced Wagtails, Kites, Pied Maxples, Crested Mynahs and Collared Crows, — a good start.

Several drongos were seen during the afternoon; this species quite definitely winter in this district as we have noticed it there in previous winters. Other summer birds included three or four pond herons; only one species remains here during the winter and this one in small numbers, it is called by Caldwell in his "South China Birds" the Fudken Pond Heron, but is not mentioned by La Touche the authority on the birds of Eastern China. The bird appears streaked dull light brown when standing but, like other pond herons and egrets, white when in flight. It is just possible that this bird is the young of the Chinese Pond Heron and not a separate species. A large grey Heron, the Eastern Grey Heron, was observed; this species is resident in the Colony but rarely seen except in this district, it frequents mud flats and marshes near the sea and is very similar to the grey heron resident in England. This species should not be confused with the Eastern Reef Heron which is a darker bird only half the size and which may often be seen near the coast.

Three species of kingfishers were seen, several Little Kingfishers, one White-breasted Kingfisher and a party of three Chinese Pied Kingfishers. Of the small birds identified the most interesting were a yellow wagtail, probably the Eastern Yellow Wagtail as it had a well marked yellow eyebrow stripe, and a Yellow-breasted Bunting. Towards the end of the afternoon when we saw that there was the possibility of establishing a record list we were particularly keen to notice any new bird but we were very surprised to see two starlings fly out of a large tree. In summer the Chinese Starling is common in the New Territories but this bird leaves the Colony in September. The two birds seen must have been specimens of the Silky Starling a rare winter visitor with the same colours as the summer visitor, white, grey and black, but with black wings and tail instead of largely white as in the Chinese Starling.

GALA NIGHT AT ROOF GARDEN

Yola And Paul Score Big Success

CARRIOCA DEMONSTRATED

Yola and Paul, the celebrated Viennese artists, were an instantaneous success last night, when they made their gala debut before a distinguished and large gathering at the Hong Kong Hotel Roof Garden.

Over 200 people dined at the Hotel, while the Roof Garden was later packed to capacity as the shows finished and the after-dinner patrons flocked in.

Yola and Paul are on their first visit to the East. They previously performed at the Paramount in Shanghai for five months and at the Nippon Gakko, in Japan, the biggest theatrical concern in the Far East.

It was the first time in the history of theatricals in Japan that a European act was put on at a Japanese theatre, and it scored a wonderful success.

Last night the dancers opened their programme with the "Viennese Waltz" the score of which was specially written for them by a celebrated Viennese composer. In this the dancers brought out all the charm and grace that personifies Viennese music.

Hong Kong has seen little of the Carrioca but last night the real "Samba", as it is known in Brazil, was performed by the clever couple. Their last number was entitled "Kiss Me" or "The Little Adagio".

The following, among others, had parties:—

Messrs. W. N. Tam, D. Cutbertson, L. B. Warren, W. Cramer, T. J. Draper, H. L. Beaumont, A. J. Stocker, A. Hanson, C. Bateb, G. Garnet, L. W. Hume, H. G. Sholdon, J. B. Macdonald, W. Y. Yuen, H. C. PRETTY WEDDING IN KOWLOON

Stonebridge—Davidson At St. Andrew's

St. Andrew's Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday afternoon when Miss Monica Bessie Stonebridge, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stonebridge of Ealing, London, became the bride of Mr. John Davidson, of the Import and Export Department, the eldest son of the late Mr. D. F. C. and Mrs. Davidson.

The Rev. N. V. Halward M.C., M.A. officiated, and was assisted by Mr. T. A. Ellis, of the Imports and Exports department.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of Mr. A. W. Davidson, the bridegroom's uncle, and who was attended by Mrs. B. Pass and little Miss "Poppy" Pass, as flower girl, was dressed in a white satin and tulle creation designed by Madame Le Vins, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and maiden hair fern.

Mrs. Pass was gowned in sea blue marocain, and also carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums, while the flower girl wore a dress of blue crepe satin and carried a small basket of pink roses. The duties of best man were carried out by Mr. T. A. Ellis.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Church Hall, after which the happy couple left on their honeymoon, to be spent at Repulse Bay Hotel, the bride wearing a nigger brown ensemble with bag and gloves to match.

ARCHDUKE HOUSES REFUGEES

Budapest, Yesterday.

The number of refugees, who have so far arrived in Hungary from Yugoslavia, is 2,436. Many more are reported to be awaiting transport to the frontier. It is believed that all Hungarians, numbering about 30,000, will be expelled.

The Hungarian Government has issued a nationwide appeal for relief funds and money is already pouring in.

The Archduke Albrecht is accommodating refugees on his estate near the Yugoslav frontier. It is expected that the frontier will be closed owing to the growing hostility of the Serbs against the Hungarians. — Reuter.

CHINA-AUSTRALIA STEAMSHIP LINE PLAN ABANDONED

North German Lloyd Action

HONG KONG TO NEW GUINEA SERVICE RETAINED

Berlin, Yesterday.

The North German Lloyd line has suddenly abandoned the plan for a China-Australia steamship service, and has sold the two ships intended for the run to an Australian company, Messrs. Burns and Phillip.

They are, however, retaining the two ships on the Hong Kong-New Guinea service. — Reuter.

The reported action of the North German Lloyd Line in resuming its Hong Kong-Australia service aroused a storm of protests in Australian and New Zealand commercial circles.

Replying to protests emanating from the Australian and New Zealand Chambers of Commerce, the North German Lloyd line said that it was merely extending to Australia its two-ship service, already existing between Hong Kong and New Guinea.

CORRESPONDENCE

BIRD LIFE

(To the Editor, "Sunday Herald.")

Sir,—Now that Hong Kong's winter has set in, I would make a plea for our wild birds. With the ground so hard and insects scarce, it is difficult for them to find sufficient food.

During the last week, I put out two meals a day—early morning and late afternoon—of crumbled bread, boiled rice, and small bits of fat. Our feathered friends soon caught sight of their repast and it was a real pleasure to watch them enjoying their meal.

Do, please, remember the birds. — A.V.A.

PRINCE HENRY PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE AUSTRALIANS

Affection For Crown And Loyalty To Empire

London, Yesterday.

H.R.H. the Duke of Gloucester's visit to Australia will conclude on Monday when he is due to sail from Brisbane to New Zealand. He fulfilled his last public duties in Brisbane yesterday, including the launch by wireless of the 24,000 tons Orient liner, "Orion," which is under construction at Barrow-in-Furness.

The Duke is spending the week-end privately at a coastal station-house where he will have opportunities of swimming and deep-sea fishing.

At the Rotary luncheon, where he was guest yesterday, the Duke said he was convinced that, whatever divergent opinions the Australian people might possess on other subjects, two sentiments were common to all, and they were deeply ingrained as to be part of their being, namely the affection for the Crown and the loyalty to the Empire.—British Wireless Service.

Rumania And Soviet End Long Historic Controversy

BUCHAREST, December 3.—Rumania today received her first envoy from Soviet Russia, thus ending in friendly manner the long and historic controversy over the possession of the rich province of Bessarabia.

Moscow sent Mikhail Ostrovsky as the first minister to Rumania since Czarist days, thereby apparently signifying the Soviet was reconciled to the loss of the border territory.

King Carol received the envoy with the fullest royal ceremony.

Rumania, once a part of Turkey in Europe, proclaimed its independence during the Russo-Turkish war on May 10, 1877, but by the treaty of Berlin in 1878 was forced to give up Bessarabia to Russia.

The world war resulted in the return of Bessarabia, the addition of

The Bunkers Of Life How Famous Men Have Cleared Them

Difficulties Lend Zest To The Game

(By the Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan.)

THERE was once a man in England who, having read a lot about golf in the papers, thought that he would like to play the game. He went to one of the public courses, bought some clubs, and took out a caddy. Explaining that he was an absolute beginner, he asked the caddy what he had to do. The latter replied that he had to put the ball on a little mound of earth, take a particular club, and hit the ball towards a flag which was in the distance.

He hit the ball a most tremendous swipe, and they went to the first green, to find that the ball was safely down the hole. "What do I do next?" he asked. "Oh," replied the caddy, "just the same again," and pointed towards the next flag. Again he took a swipe, but when they reached the green the ball was two inches from the pin. "Blow and bust," (or words to that effect) said the man, "I've missed it. This game is no good to me."

He learned later, as others have done, that the game is not as simple as all that. The whole point of games is that they should be difficult. That is why clubs spend thousands of pounds in making their courses as hard as possible. The harder the course the better it is liked by experienced players. They demand that the course shall test their skill, patience and temper.

Besides, the difficulties lend zest and adventure to the game. Without them it would not be worth playing. Many a player whose ball is entrapped in a bunker wishes, however that they had never been invented.

Unskilful players find it all too easy to get in, and all too hard to get out. Such is the task the game gives them, and the task makes the game. The average player may at least take comfort in the fact that there are no infallible players, and that even those who write books on it visit bunkers now and again.

Men differ greatly in their attitude towards bunkers. Some are no good the moment they get into difficulties. They lose their spirit. They fume at their luck, and say nasty, unkind and entirely untrue things about their clubs, the ball and the course. They get flurried and hit wildly. The "bunker" defeats

Transylvania from Hungary and of Bukovina with part of the Banat, Crisana and Maramuresh from the Austro-Hungarian empire, based on ethnological grounds.

The treaty of the European powers giving Bessarabia to Rumania was not recognised by Russia, but became effective nevertheless when Italy ratified it in 1927. In negotiating a non-aggression treaty with the Little Entente, of which Rumania is a member, in 1931, however, Moscow seemed to have tacitly accepted Bessarabia as belonging to Rumania.

The province accounts for approximately 2,866,000 of Rumania's estimated population of 18,025,237.

One other member of the Little Entente, Czechoslovakia, has given diplomatic recognition to Soviet Russia, but the other, Yugoslavia, has refrained.—Associated Press.

land who, having read a lot about golf in the papers, thought that he would like to play the game. He went to one of the public courses, bought some clubs, and took out a caddy. Explaining that he was an absolute beginner, he asked the caddy what he had to do. The latter replied that he had to put the ball on a little mound of earth, take a particular club, and hit the ball towards a flag which was in the distance.

On the other hand the best players got out of them wonderfully well. Sandy Herd said it was a bad sign as it showed practice! But being in, it is a great thing to have the skill and knowledge for getting out. There is a story of Sayers, the old Scotch professional, when playing in a tournament at Weymouth. From the third tee, his ball lodged in the ivy of the castle wall. He chose a club, climbed like a squirrel, fixed himself firmly among the ivy, and hit the ball clean, almost to the pin.

Such clubs are of interest to all players in the greater game of life. There are difficulties there also which give the game zest; and make it splendid. Sometimes we wish that that life were less difficult, that the bunkers with which we meet might be avoided, but without them life would be a pretty poor thing. And after all, the conditions are much the same for most of us. The greatest players have been tested and tried much as the rest of us. They had no special privileges. They came into desperate situations, and one of the most inspiring things in the world is to hear of their play in those grim hours.

The late Hon. J. R. Clynes was a case in point. His family were very poor, and he had to start work at the age of 10. He had practically no schooling, and had to fight for his education. He loved reading, especially reading aloud. At first the sound of words fascinated him. Then he saw that they had something more than mere beauty of sound, and that to grip that something, was to hold one of life's greatest treasures. So he bought a dictionary at the cost of sixpence. He studied it at night by candle light, and the candles cost him half of his meagre week's pocket money.

Night after night he went through his dictionary, writing out the unfamiliar words, until he had thoroughly mastered them. The bigger the words the better he loved them. It may not be the best way of getting out, but there was no one to show him a better. So he cleared the bunker of poverty and ignorance, and came out on to the fairway of influence and respect, ending up as a Cabinet Minister.

Others have found themselves in the bunker of misfortune, sometimes through no fault of their own. Think of Sir Walter Scott. All his money was invested in the publishing firm of Ballantyne. They failed, and Scott shouldered the heavy burden of responsibility. He determined honourably to meet his liabilities. He was past middle age. He said that the best of his energies had been expended, but bravely he accepted the challenge and resolved to clear the bunker.

Year after year he toiled at his writing, working day and night. Each year saw another novel. Scott was never greater than when facing up to these misfortunes. The Master of life had set him the task, and he refused to run away, or ignore them.

There is the bunker of sin,—plain common or garden sin, and there are mighty few of us in the game of life who do not get caught, and caught properly in its toils. For life does not get easier as the years slip by. Acts form into habits that are so hard to break. Yet always there is a way out, just as there is in every other difficulty we meet with as the days go by. We carry all the clubs we need, and they have been used by countless thousands across nineteen centuries of the Christian Faith,—prayer, and simple trust in the finished work, and power of Christ in human life.

At the end there comes the addition of the score. So it is with us. Let us just remember that. When the last great Scorer Comes at length to write your name, He will not write you won or lost, But how you played the game.

Congressional quarters are quietly distributing the word that the Administration opposes abrupt changes in the banking structure, which is regarded as another reassuring gesture aimed at bringing private interests increasingly into the recovery movement.

Banking authorities have predicted that the rehabilitation of the nation's banking will be completed within six months, at a cost of U.S.$3,000,000,000.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

Amsterdam, Yesterday.

The well-known Netherlands Trading Society of Amsterdam is writing off 60,000,000 guilders, which is 75 per cent. of the capital, and will further reduce the reserves by 15,000,000 guilders.

A new issue of 15,000,000 guilders brings the capital again to 35,000,000 guilders.

The President explains that the Society must be brought to a paying basis in connection with the altered circumstances. The Society, formerly, was greatly interested in Java sugar estates.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

BAGUIO GOLD TO EXPAND

More Equipment For Mill Output

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Baguio Gold Mining Company, held on December 3, it was decided to increase the plant capacity to 200 to 250 tons per day.

The directors have authorized the immediate purchase of the necessary equipment for the mine and the added machinery for the mill in order to bring the production up to this figure. Plans have been prepared in advance for the installation of this equipment, and the work will proceed as rapidly as possible.

"During" late September and early October, prospecting work began to show such results that it became evident that added equipment was necessary for efficient work in the mine, and that development work for 1935 would supply a tonnage of ore which must be sent to the mill, because of its average value," Mr. W. W. Harris, President of the Baguio Gold Mining Company, declared.

The general superintendent in his report to the board of directors states:

"In conjunction with the mine superintendent I have made a survey of the ore reserves in the mine, and I estimate positive, probably, and prospective ore at 231,550 tons of a value of $1,406,275.00 (based on gold at $20.67) or at the present market price of gold at $35.00 per oz., $2,576,604.00 or Pesos 4,753,208.00."

In view of the recommendations of the general superintendent and the estimated tonnage of ore as shown by the reports submitted, the board of directors have authorized the increase of the milling capacity.

Messrs. Dun and Bradstreet, market experts, are optimistic. For the past two and a half months, they state, more constructive effort has been applied to fortifying the basis of business expansion than in any similar period of the last year and a half.

"The progress which will follow the inauguration of this movement will doubtless be without parallel in modern commercial history for the abruptness of its rise," they declare.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

WALLACE WARNS RAILROADS

Higher Rates Prolong Depression

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924. Received December 8, 9.50 a.m.)

Washington, Yesterday.

Testifying before the Interstate Commerce Commission, the United States Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Henry C. Wallace, said that if they persist in seeking higher rates for farm products, the railroads will prolong the depression and lose much of their present business.

He said the present rates had caused farmers to resort to trucking, therefore there was an urgent need for a lower rail rate.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

The Airship Cannot Be Ignored

Admiralty conference in 1912 decided to abandon airship construction. We then rolled on non-rigids bought from other countries, and when the war broke out there were about half a dozen.

We had practically no experience of rigid airships during the war, and when the Armistice was signed we owned 103 airships, nearly all non-rigids. They have been scrapped.

Then the R33 was launched in March 1919. It cost £350,000 and another £20,000 to recondition in 1924. It broke away from its mast in 1925 and cost another £46,000 for repairs. But it did put in 800 hours flying time.

Then there was the R34. She cost £350,000, but made the first double crossing of the Atlantic. She struck high ground in 1921 and was wrecked after putting in 500 hours. As a result the R35, already costing £75,000, was never completed. The contract was cancelled.

Disaster Of The R38

The R36 was launched (£350,000). After a few months' trials she had an accident and was never flown again. Another £13,500 was spent on her in 1923-6, but the plans for tropical work were then cancelled. R37 cost £325,000, was never completed, and the structure was scrapped.

R38 cost half a million. The United States agreed to buy her. She was wrecked during trials over the Humber and 44 lives were lost. She had only flown 70 hours. So R39 was cancelled after £90,000 had been spent.

In 1924 we fiddled with an airship policy again at Cardington and Popham. The Air Ministry started to build R101, and the Airship Guarantee Company got a contract for R109.

When the R101 hit that fatal knoll at Beauvais she was carrying the men who knew most about the heavier-than-air business. No one had the heart to go on with a policy which had swallowed so much good money and so many good men.

Germany's Many Disasters

The German success was not quite the antithesis of this grim story that it now seems. Her pre-war experiments were blotted with a trail of disasters and in war the only real use of Zeppelins was to act as eyes for the fleet. Between 1900 and 1914 25 Zeppelins were built, of which 13 were wrecked or burnt and eight broken up. The most reliable of these was the "Victoria Luise," which carried 23 passengers 200 miles in 1912, and had, by the end of 1913, carried 10,000 passengers on a total of 400 trips. In 1914 Germany had nine airships, and in 1917 the first long-distance flight was made with the L59, in an attempt to drop supplies for the forces in South-West Africa.

Furthermore, if any Government builds 88 airships, as Germany did in those four years, the experience is there to draw on. They drew on it. The success of the Graf Zeppelin has not been due to luck, nor is it peculiar to Eckener's genius for navigation. They built them in the right way and profited by it.

Two Main Objections

There are two main objections to building airships for commercial use. They fly too slowly and they cannot stand rough weather. Since 1930 the accumulating safety record of the Graf Zeppelin has slowly proved that safety is a matter of structure. But fortunately for us the airship is still beaten for speed. In 1930 the time estimate for the Australian journey was:

Bombay 4½ days
Singapore 8 days
Australia 10 days
The new Zeppelin will have a cruising speed of only 75 m.p.h.

But the airship has the aeroplane beaten for range. It can carry fuel for 6000 miles. The corollary to this is that it can afford to make detours to avoid bad weather. It can also carry a good payload of 50 passengers, mail and freight, with the passengers living in comfort. It is a paying proposition; at the moment our aerial plans are patriotic, not paying.

I am not saying that the airship is the vessel of the future, or that the Air Ministry has grossly neglected its duty. Too many bricks are being thrown at that Department already without a gratuitous contribution on airships. But I do say that we have for four years left out of all our calculations a form of aircraft which is certainly not obsolete. If Dr. Eckener flies

Gratification at the success of the second annual Diocesan Bazaar, which was declared open by Mrs. Borrett, wife of H.E. the General Officer Commanding the Troops, Major-General O. C. Borrett, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O., at the grounds of the Bishop's House and St. Paul's College, yesterday morning, was expressed by officials in charge of the function.

Approximately $4,500 was collected, including $1,413.80 from the street sale of flowers. By returning $95.88, Miss Chan Tse-ming, of St. Paul's Girls' College, won Miss F. C. Wood's prizes for the girl who sold the most flowers. Miss Chan's station was Pedder Street. Others who took leading places were Miss Pang Ying-lin, $563.39; Miss Wong Lai-sun, $487.73; Miss Pang Siu-mui, $446.21; and Miss Fung Yuk-wa, $412.22.

Aim of Bazaar

The bazaar was held for the purpose of raising $8,000 for the support of workers in the country districts and small towns. This is an addition to the $6,000 already provided by the Church Missionary Society and the amounts contributed by the districts.

It is for the maintenance of doctors, teachers, and catechists in districts where there are few Christians.

At the numerous stalls attractive articles were on display. There were beautiful knitted goods, garments, fancy goods, perfumery, rattan work, stationery, fruits and vegetables and toys.

Articles displayed at the fancy goods stall, made and donated by the teachers and students of St. Stephen's Girls' College, were particularly distinctive.

One of the features of the bazaar was provided by Mr. W. J. Scotcher, of Messrs. Reiss, Massey and Company, Limited, who executed lightning sketches and caricatures for 20 cents.

Ample entertainment was provided by the side-shows, such as the bagatelle, lawn bowls, darts, ping pong, hoopla, the bran-tub and the ladder climb.

Music, under the direction of Mr. Andrew Chan, was provided by Messrs. Peter Cheung, Clement Leung, Lawrence, Leung, Chow Siu-ki, Wong Yung-yu, Chang Tsung-kin, Sung Chik-wong and Pong Tak-ming.

Generous Support

The bazaar had the support of many local firms, who contributed generously towards its success. The following were among the firms who made contributions:

The Wing On Company, The Sun Company, The Colonial Electric Company, The World Drug Company, C. Ah Ying and Company, Limited, Fuk Hing Printing Press, Lee Wah Mui Company, On Lok Yuen Ltd., Sap Mei Sweet Company, Po Sum On Yau Company, Standard Chemical Works, Ltd., Universal Sweet Company, Luk Wo Drug Store, Sze Cheong Company, China Emporium Ltd., The Sincere Company Ltd., The Amoy Canning Corporation, Ltd., Agfa Isochrom Film, Blue Bird Company, Ltd., Kwong Sang Hong Ltd., and the Swatow Drawn Work Company.

Lai Wah Cup Sensation

raids and gave an entrancing display of short-passing work, which considerably worried Pardoe and his supporting halves.

Leung Wing-chui reserved his energy for the second period at which stage his distributive and collective efforts were exemplary. It was mainly from this feature of the Chinese play that Ip Pak-wa and Tao Kwai-shing were able to send across their many brilliant centres, which, though without result, gave the Army custodian many anxious moments.

Both Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang started shakily, but their recovery was effected in a short time, however, and, after the opening lapses, their display was more than sufficient to hold the Army attack.

The Army forwards after a brilliant opening, dropped down the scale in contrast, though the contrast was to some extent due to the recovery on the part of the Chinese defence.

Ridley Off Form

Ridley was consistently good when in possession, but his endeavours to pass to a team-fellow when ridding himself of the ball were extraordinarily weak, a feature in which he is usually the most accurate of players. Edmunds worked energetically and well during the opening half, but lost several opportunities later in the game when an extended effort was called for.

Higgins' bustling efforts completely baffled the Chinese defence for quite a considerable period, and, though his work showed no apparent result, his helping work was conspicuous. Both Baldry and English centred well, and, though the latter slowed up somewhat in the latter stages of the game, their play on the whole was consistently maintained.

Pardoe took the limelight early in the game and continued his good work for the full duration, receiving invaluable assistance from his wing halves, Dudley and North, the latter being exceptionally good in his spilling.

Army's Early Lead

The Army took a very early lead, when Pardoe took a snap-shot through a crowd of players with Wong Wing momentarily unslighted, and the ball just scraped past Wong's outstretched hands into the corner of the net.

This early goal put vigour into the Army team, and, though the interchanges of play were fast and frequent, the Army forwards appeared the more dangerous when in possession.

Lau Mau stopped a nice run by Edmunds, but English got through to send a cross-shot at Wong Wing, who, however, held and made a nice clearance to Tao Kwai-shing. The latter took the ball on the run down-field and centred beautifully only for Morrison to intercept neatly with his head.

The Army went very close when English gave Edmunds the ball for the latter to send in a drive just wide of the upright. At the other end North arrived opportunely to take the ball off the foot of Fung King-cheong as the latter was about to make a drive for goal, and Ridley, taking the ball up the field, made a brilliant run only to fold the effort with a wild pass.

Ip Pak-wa put across a glorious centre right to the waiting Tam in front of the Army goal, but Morrison got between Tam's effort and the goal.

Army's Second Goal

The Army went very close to increasing the lead, when Baldry sent a ground pass right across the goal-mouth but Edmunds, going through with only the goalkeeper to beat, over-ran the ball.

Higgins placed the Army further ahead as the result of opportunism, after Lau Mau had mis-judged a bounding forward pass. Higgins snuffed up the ball and netted past the oncoming Wong Wing.

From the kick-off, the Chinese went away and Tam sent in a shot which Durham saved, but while still in possession he was charged by Wong Moo-shun. Durham threw clear, but only just, the point at which he cleared the ball being debatable.

The Chinese followed up the attack and Fung got his head to a corner-kick which needed all Durham's

TO-DAY'S FOOTBALL PROGRAMME

Fusiliers Make Debut Against Gunners

ALL-INDIA CUP PLAYER FOR ST. JOSEPH'S DEFENCE

The Royal Welch Fusiliers make their soccer debut to-day, when they encounter the Royal Artillery on the Club ground.

Both teams are fairly weak, and it will be interesting to see whether the Artillery can get out of their present position of wooden-spoons.

The Lincolns who have disappointed their supporters so far this season, are favoured to win against St. Joseph's, whom they meet on the Kowloon ground.

The Saints are making two changes in their side. David Leonard has been moved up to the centre forward position from right back, while his vacancy is being filled by a newcomer, K. Mohamed, who has played in the final of the Durran Cup in India. The latter trophy is for the All-India championship.

All-Round Advantage

This change will strengthen the defence and at the same time speed up the attack.

In the Second Division the Gunners and Fusiliers meet on the Club ground, while a good game should result from the meeting of South China and the East Lanes.

In the Third Division the Lincolns, last year's champions, meet the East Lanes, who are now leading this Division.

The following is the forecast giving the favoured team in capital letters:

TO-DAY

FIRST DIVISION

LINCOLNS v St. Joseph's (Kowloon, 4 p.m.)
ARTILLERY v Fusiliers (Club, 4 p.m.)

SECOND DIVISION

ARTILLERY v Fusiliers (Club, 2.30 p.m.)
S. China v EAST LANES (Caroline Hill, 2.30 p.m.)

THIRD DIVISION

Railway v R.A.S.C. (Railway, 2.30 p.m.)
EAST LANES v Lincolns (Railway, 4 p.m.)

agility to deflect over the bar. Fung and Wong tested Durham again, but were unsuccessful and the same fate awaited the efforts of Ridley and Higgins at the other end.

Fung Reduces The Lead

Play resumed at its previous standard after the interval, until Wong Moo-shun sent Fung through after a clever run.

Fung took the ball in his stride and drove hard and true for the left-hand top corner of the net to reduce the Army lead.

From this point the Chinese standard improved amazingly, and for quite 10 minutes they did as they liked with the ball. Two attempts from Wong were diverted by the watchful Durham, the second effort being an oblique-shot which Durham just managed to tip across the goal.

Tam's header just topped the bar and a long drive from Leung Wing-chui suffered the same fate. After one or two more unattended efforts the Army commenced to take their share of the game.

At this period, the Chinese featured some exceptionally clever head-work.

Pardoe came close to scoring with several well-directed long shots, and Higgins and Ridley both tested Wong Wing with high drives. Their efforts were unsuccessful, however, and, perhaps, because of the Chinese superiority at this stage, the Army never really looked like netting again.

The Chinese on the other hand required the closest watching whenever they approached the Army goal, and but for the inspired efforts of the Morrison-Swaine team-work, their efforts would certainly have been productive.

Continuing the pressure the Chinese found themselves baulked, just at the last moment and though at this point they played as good football as they have ever done, they were fighting against a superior defence.

Chinese—Wong Wing; Li Tin-sang, Lau Mau; Leung In-chai, Leung Wing-chui, Lee Kwok-wai; Tao Kwai-shing, Wong Moo-shun, Fung King-cheong, Tam Kung-pak and Ip Pak-wa.
Army—Durham; Swaine, Morrison; Dudley, Pardoe, North; Baldry, Edmunds, Higgins, Ridley and English.

The Gosano brothers played excellently, although Bertie, on the right-wing, was neglected a great deal during the first half.

Stephen's Prominent

The best man in a forward line of good men was Stephens at inside-right—he played a marvellous game, perhaps he could have given B. Gosano more opportunities during the first half, but otherwise his play was faultless.

Rodger was kept on his toes during the first portion of the game when the Navy were very aggressive, but he had not much actual work to do as the ball rarely came his way, being directed wide or over the top more often than not.

Chris Pile played a great game at left-back but Syd Strange was not worth his place—he kicked clear very strongly on occasions, but he mis-kicked too frequently. Brooks and Beltrao played well. Beltrao played a very constructive game, his passes being well-judged and always reached their objective.

Combination Lacking

The Navy's forward line were good, but they did not combine so well as their opponents. The palm must go to Wearmouth, on the left wing, who played a very fast game, playing rings round Syd Strange and sending in some very fine centres which should have been converted if the remaining forwards had kept up.

Killey and Smith, on the other wing, were good, but Crawford, making his first appearance in a representative game, was rather slow. He played very hard, however, and was particularly good during the last 10 minutes or so, when the others were weakening.

The half-backs played well, but could not hold Gosano's line. McGuire had some pretty touches at times, but he was by no means on form.

The Navy's best men were in the defence, Ryecroft and West playing the games of their lives, both clearing well and strongly.

Pepper Exceeds In Goal

Pepper, in goal, played marvellously well—on yesterday's form he was certainly worth an Interport cap. During the second half when the Navy were on the defensive, Pepper was literally peppered with shots, and the fact that only four evaded him and entered the net is a true indication of the excellent display he gave.

The Navy went away from the centre kick, Syd Strange saving the situation when he punted a fine centre from Wearmouth over the top for a corner. From the clearance Bertie Gosano got away to test Pepper with a ground shot, the Navy's custodian just managing to turn it round the post. Bickford had hard luck when he sent in a fine shot goalwards to see it crash into the side net. Stevens tried a fine shot from 30 yards a few minutes later, the ball just skimming the upright.

Navy Open Scoring

The first goal was scored after 10 minutes. Killey took the ball up the wing and passed inside to Cannell who returned the ball to Smith who beat Rodger.

The Navy again took possession from the centre and Chris Pile saved a certain goal when, standing on the goal-line beside Rodger, he knocked a shot from Love down with his hand. McGuire took the penalty kick and shot directly at Rodger, but as one of the Civilian players had moved the kick was re-taken and McGuire sent it over the top. It was splendid opportunity which the Navy skipper should not have missed.

The second goal was added five minutes later. Killey again sending in a fine centre for Cannell to score with a fine drive.

A. V. Gosano looked like scoring when he made a fine side run down the middle. He went through, the Navy quite easily until he met West, who guessed the Civilian's leader and sent the ball out of play for a corner.

Civilians Aggressive

The Civilian's reduced the lead five minutes before half time. From a melee in front of goal the ball was headed back to B. Gosano who caught Pepper unawares with a fine shot which hit the roof of the rigging.

The Navy continued to attack,

NAVY BEAT CLUB IN EVEN GAME

Listless Civilian Forwards

PENALTY OPENING GOAL

The Navy further enhanced their position in the Second Division when they defeated the Club on the latter's ground yesterday by 3 goals to 1.

The Navy had the better of play in the opening half, but the Club recovered later in the game to give a good account of themselves.

Glass again showed his ability when in possession, and by clever ball-control, combined with a good hard drive, made his presence felt on numerous occasions. Both O'Donnell and Males, on either side of him, were exceptionally good together, and initiated several fine movements. Of the wingers Dadds was the more effective, his centreing being noteworthy for its accuracy.

Half-Back Strength

To the intermediate line, however, the Navy owed much of their superiority, the distributive work of Bower, backed by the effective tackling and blocking work of his partners, Bright and Parratt, being the source of the majority of the Navy raids.

Soloman and Smith were steady throughout and cleared effectively, leaving little or nothing for Mac Sweeney to deal with.

In the Club team Farrow was far and away the best. His passing was accurate and always was to the best advantage, while in tackling his energy was used advantageously. Both Skinner and Fowler contributed quite a considerable share to the safety of the Club goal.

Listless Forwards

Duncan and Fisher played well in the forward line, though they lost many opportunities which with a slight output of energy might have made quite an appreciable difference.

The Navy opened well with a breakaway attempt which, however, was foiled by the timely intervention of Payne. They took the lead when Bower, noted for a penalty, but shortly after the Club equalised, Fisher completing a nice movement by beating Mac Sweeney with a hard corner-drive.

In the second period the Navy took the lead early through Dadds, which was followed by another, this time from O'Donnell, who flashed in a shot while on the run.

Club—Payne; Binnie, Hynes; Skinner, Farrow, Fowler; Williams, Fisher, Duncan, Nicholls and Stoker.
Navy—MacSweeney; Soloman, Smith; Parratt, Bower, Bright; Dadds, Males, O'Donnell and Adams.

and Wearmouth centred beautifully for McGuire to shoot into Rodger's hands. A few seconds later Smith missed an open goal when he received a forward pass from Love to shoot over the top.

West was again instrumental in thwarting the Civilian's when he brought Stephens down after the latter had crashed his way through from the half-way line. There was no more scoring, however, in the first half, and the Navy were leading at the interval by 2 goals to 1.

On resuming, the Civilian's were very aggressive. In the first moment Ernie Strange ran through, Pepper making a great save when he stopped a shot from three yards.

About ten minutes after the resumption Bickford lobbed the ball into the centre for A. V. Gosano to equalise with a fine header.

Bickford's play had now decidedly improved and from a good centre Bertie Gosano had hard luck when he was caught on the wrong foot and shot wide.

Stephens placed the Civilian's ahead with a gift goal. Bickford centred, Pepper ran out of his goal, gathered the ball and was bouncing it prior to clearing when Stephens interrupted and sent it into an empty goal.

The last goal of the game was added a moment later (about 10 minutes from time). Ernie Strange and Ryecroft were struggling for possession, when A. V. Gosano dashed in and scored his second goal. The Navy were now completely demoralised and were very fortunate that more goals were not added before full time.

It was very clean game, with the honours fairly even, and the Civilian's deserved to win.

Navy—Pepper; Ryecroft, West; Pyatt, McGuire, Love; Killey, Smith, Cannell, Crawford and Wearmouth.
Civilian's—Rodger; Strange, E. C. Pile, Brooks, Beltrao, Parker; B. Gosano, Stephens, A. V. Gosano, E. Strange and Bickford.

HASSAN CARRIED OFF FIELD

Fractured Leg: Radio Lose To Police

Playing against ten men, the Hong Kong Police (Chinese) had the best of their encounter with the Radio at Kowloon yesterday, winning by two clear goals.

An unfortunate accident in the first moment of play robbed the Radio of one of their best men, M. H. Hassan, who was carried off with a fractured leg. The accident was doubly unfortunate inasmuch as Hassan had been selected to take part in the hockey trial to-day—he was to have played at centre-half for the Probables.

The goals were scored by Chang Chin, centre-forward, and Kwong Hing, inside-right.

NO REFEREE AND NO GOAL POSTS

Another Third Division match had to be abandoned yesterday, owing to the absence of the referee, and no goal posts being put up on the military ground at Happy Valley.

This week the victims were the R.A.O.C. and the Royal Welch Fusiliers.

After waiting some time, it was decided to play a friendly match on the vacant Naval Recreation Club ground, but, owing to a fixture between two naval teams, the game had to be called off at half-time with the Fusiliers leading by a goal to nil.

MEDICALS BEAT ENGINEERS

At Happy Valley yesterday the R.A.M.C. secured two points when they defeated the Engineers by the only goal of the match.

The standard of play, after a period of Medical superiority, was very even on the whole.

The defence of both teams had matters well in hand for the greater part of the game and in consequence play was kept out of the danger areas.

Pim noted the R.A.M.C. goal as the result of a clever movement, his shot easily beating the opposing keeper.

CHEFOO CUSTOMS HOLD SHIPMENT OF CANTON RICE

Apparently the Chinese Customs at Shanghai and Chefoo are under the impression that the rice from Canton is not produced in Kwangtung, since this province never grows sufficient rice for its own use and has to import large amounts from Indo-China and Siam. During the past year Canton has imported rice from Wuhu, Anhui province.

C.B.A. BEAT THE RECREIO

The Recreio slackened their pace after the interval, and the C.B.A. enjoyed most of the play. Their shooting, however, was not very accurate, and time and time again goals were missed.

With only fifteen minutes to go Miss Whitley broke through the staunch Recreio defence to beat Miss Roza and give the C.B.A. the lead.

Shortly afterwards, Miss E. Woolley, spurred on by her colleague's success, netted the second goal after a fine solo run.

The teams were:—
C.B.A.—F. Best, P. Woolley, F. K. Walker, M. Bryson, E. Beavis, G. MacNider, R. Blackmore, N. Whitley, E. Woolley, M. Smith and D. Hunt.

Club de Recreio Ladies—G. Roza, C. Osmund, M. Basto, E. Rosario, E. Xavier, N. Soares, B. Remedios, C. Botelho, C. Silva, A. Alves and M. Remedios.

Miss Knill worked hard as the leader of the Schoolgirls, but she lacked the support necessary to carry her attacks through.

The wingers were a trifle too slow in ridding themselves of the ball, but this was due to inexperience, for they were up against a very sound half-back line.

Good Forwards

Miss Churchill was the pick of the Hong Kong Ladies' forwards, and, although she distributed the ball well, she scored on two occasions.

Mrs. Harrop was also on form and made an ideal leader, but Miss Ferguson was inclined to be selfish. The wingers, Miss Marsh and Miss Jacks, were good and used their speed to advantage.

Miss Holbling was the pick of the winners' two backs, Miss Gray being erratic when pressed.

The Hong Kong Ladies led by three clear goals at the interval.

In the second period the Schoolgirls were penned in their own half for the majority of play, but during their occasional breakaways, they were poorly served at forward and failed to score.

Miss J. Churchill (2), Mrs. Harrop (2), Miss Ferguson, Miss Marsh, and Miss Jacks scored the goals.

The teams were:—
H.K. Ladies—B. Hance; B. Holbling, and E. M. Gray; E. O'Hagan, Mrs. O. Bennett and H. Hanco; A. Jacks, J. Churchill (Captain), Mrs. P. M. Harrop, C. Ferguson and Miss F. Marsh.

C.B. Schoolgirls—D. Moss, M. Lam, M. M. McCaw and J. Lakeman; E. Rousseau, J. Humphreys, H. Knill (Captain), A. Martin and P. Stringer.

SOUTH-WEST RESOLUTIONS FOR NANKING

The document recalls the resolution of the Fourth National Congress requiring officials to defend national territory and instructing Marshal Chiang Kai-shek to go North to deal with the situation.

Suppression of terrorist and murderous activities of certain secret organizations is also demanded in the resolutions.

Financial reconstructive reforms are also urged in the resolutions, which criticise the $1,500,000,000 loan bonds used for civil war, and the July tariff which is in favour of Japanese goods.

Finally, the resolutions demand the freedom of the press, and has to import large amounts from Indo-China and Siam. During the past year Canton has imported rice from Wuhu, Anhui province.

TINNED SALMON FOR BABY

Coroner's Comment On Bad Feeding

"It is deplorable that this child should have existed at all and one can only hope that there will be no other children born of these parents," said Dr. Edwin Smith, the West London Coroner, at an inquest at Hammersmith to-day on a four-weeks-old child who died from inability to assimilate food.

Dr. James Howell, Medical Officer of Health for Hammersmith, said that altogether four of the mother's children had died and two were in the care of the Guardians.

"She has fed her children badly," said the doctor. "Once I found that she was feeding a four-months-old baby on tinned salmon."

The Coroner. Obviously she is not fit to have any more children.

Mohamed Ghazi, a young Egyptian mason, is claimed to be the tallest man in the world. He is 9ft.

Three years ago he was less than 6ft. tall when he fell from a building on which he was working, injuring his head, since when doctors in Egypt have not been able to stem his rapid growth.

The young man is so weak that he has to lie down all day. Doctors are unable to operate because of the weak state of his heart.

He is now living with his parents in the largest room in the house, which, however, is only 11ft. long. If Mohamed grows much taller he

QUEEREST GIFT FOR DUKE

Model Of Zulu Witch
Doctor Hé Met

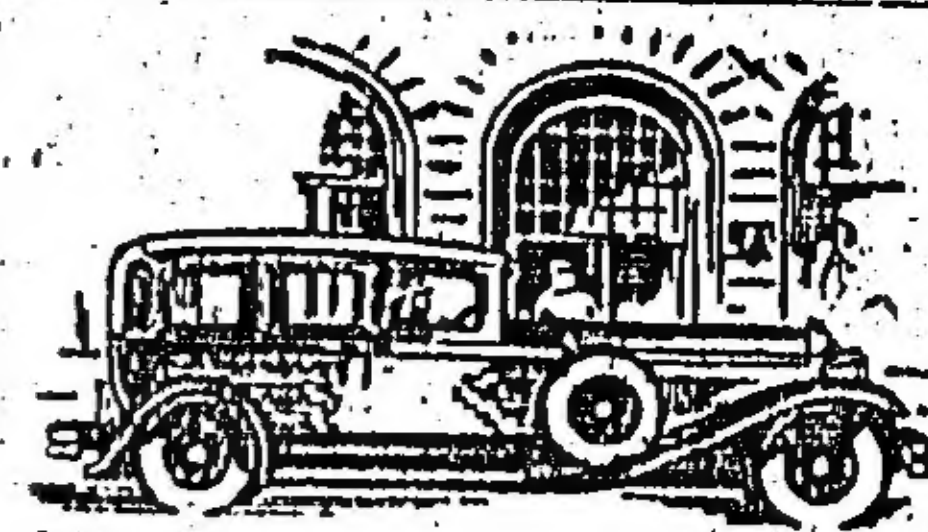

The queerest wedding gift presented to the Duke of Kent was a model of a Zulu witch doctor.

The donor, as mayor of a South African town, entertained the Duke during his recent tour, when he met the witch doctor, Saksamsha, powerful among the natives.

Mr. H. Erynevelt, the artist who made the two-foot coloured model with cement, plaster and clay, died within two weeks of completing it.

An audience was given by the Duke at St. James' Palace to the donor to allow him to deliver his gift personally.

will have to be taken back to hospital, where the rooms are larger.

MOTORING NOTES

EXAMPLES OF CAR LONGEVITY

King Fuad's Satisfaction

Not long ago H.M. King Fuad of Egypt showed his affection for a favourite chassis, a 1914 model 40-50-h.p. Rolls-Royce, by having a new limousine body built for it by Hoopers, the well-known London coachbuilders.

He has again shown his satisfaction by placing an order with the same firm for a new body for yet another of his cars, this time a 1920 model 40-50-h.p. Rolls-Royce.

HOW TO ADJUST HEADLAMPS

Taking Eye-Strain Out
Of Night Driving

Eye-strain will go out of night driving if the headlamps are correctly adjusted.

Place the car about 25ft. or more away from the garage door, a wall, or the straight side of a building, switch on the headlamps, and then adjust their angle so that when you are looking sideways at them the beam of one cannot be seen appearing over that of the other.

CORRECT OILING IN COLD WEATHER

Vital Necessity

Correct oiling is vital during the winter. There is a greater tendency now—and during the next few months—for a proportion of unburnt petrol to get past the piston rings into the crankcase. Sooty carbon and traces of water will also accumulate.

OIL SLUDGE IN CRANKCASE

Removal Important

In light, modern engines of low horse-power, where high revolutions are depended upon, removal of all oil sludge from the crankcase is particularly important.

The higher the revolutions, the greater the heat; the hotter the engine, the greater the need for clean oil.

REAL FUNCTION OF MOTOR OIL

Carries Away The Heat

What many motorists do not fully realise is that the function of oil is not only to lubricate two surfaces in close contact, but to carry away the heat set up by the surfaces between which it runs.

Clean oil conducts away heat; old oil does not.

BAFFLING THE CAR "BORROWER"

Cars which have not gear or ignition locks can easily be prevented from being stolen or "borrowed," by removing the rotor from the distributor and replacing the cover, or by installing a secret ignition switch in the low voltage circuit of the coil; thus, although the dashboard switch is turned on, the current will not reach the coil until the concealed switch has been operated.

MORE TROLLEY-BUSES FOR PENANG

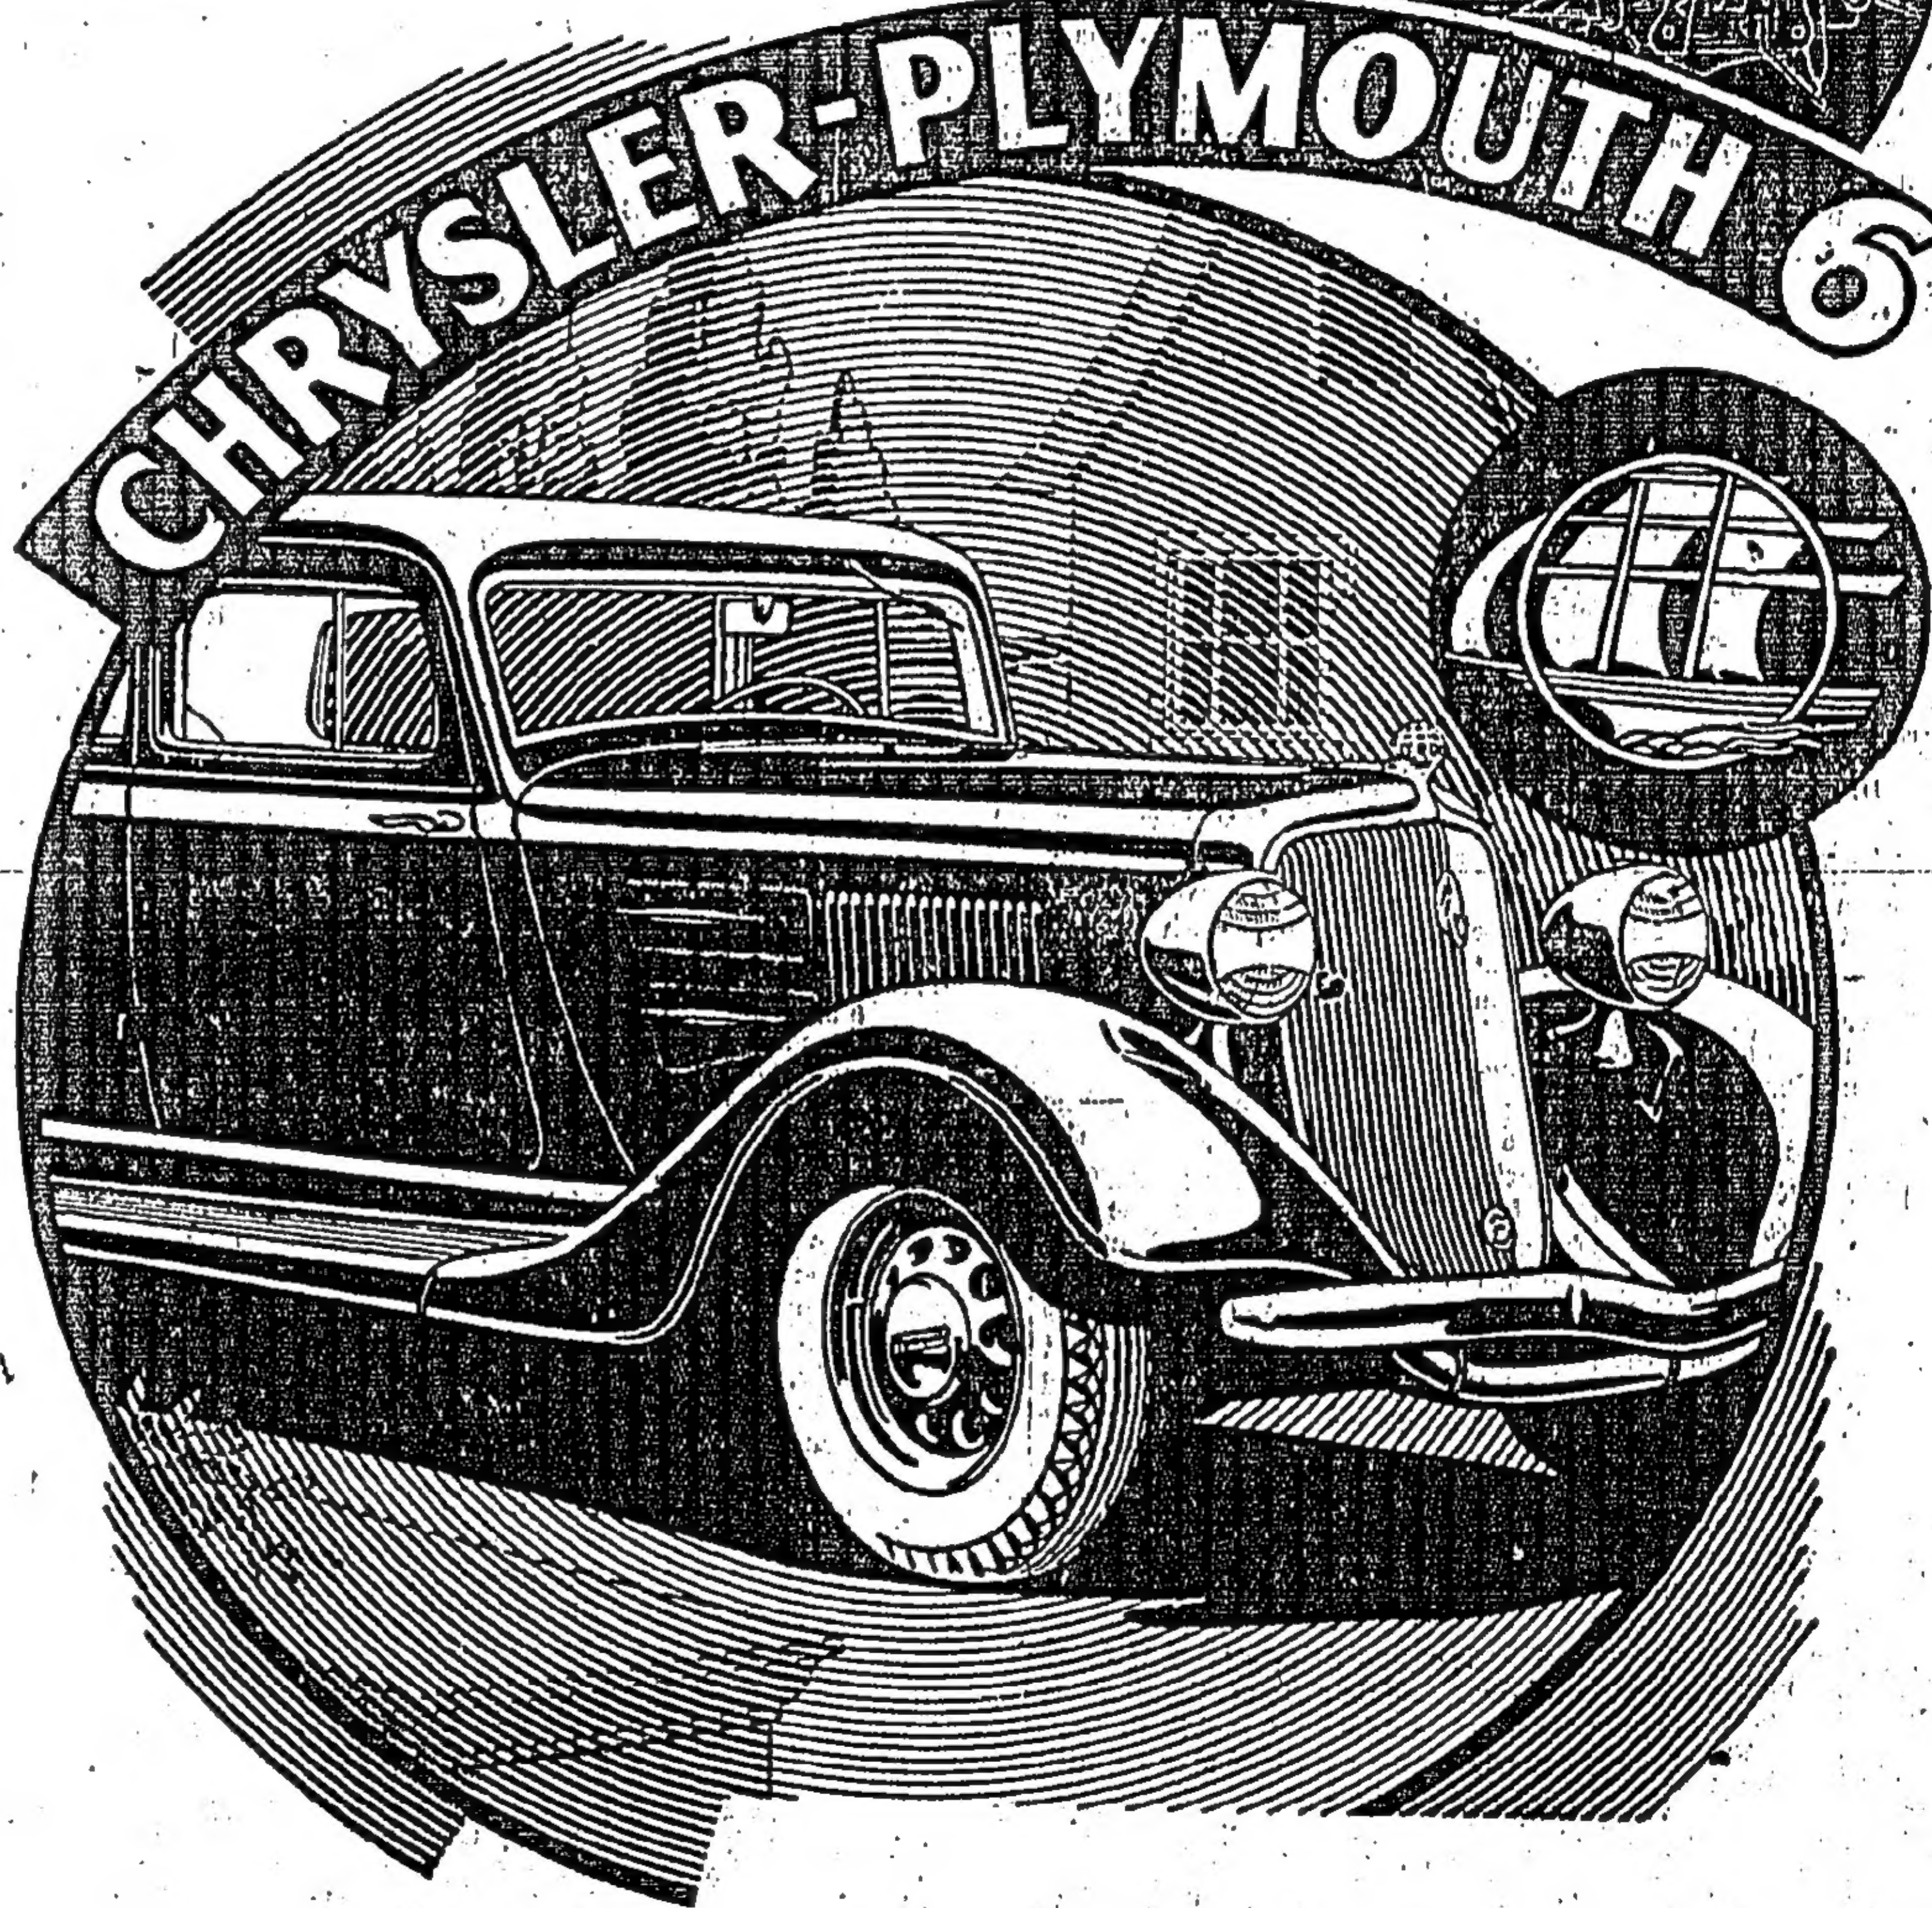

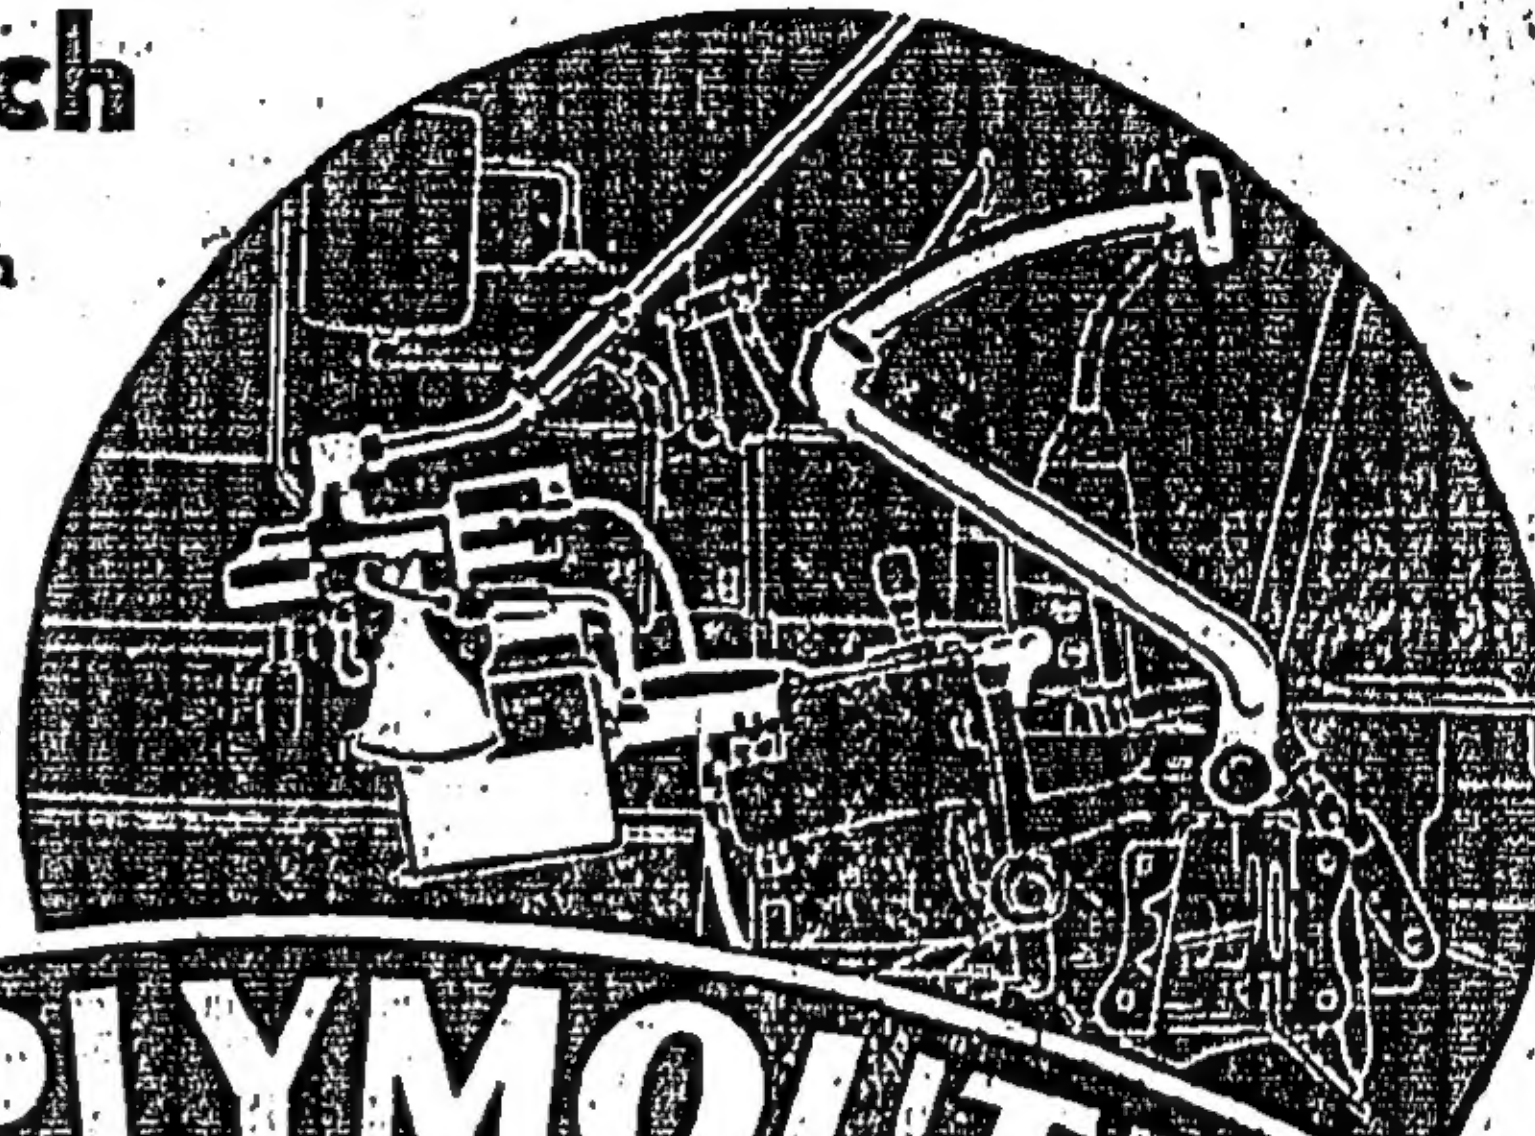

Further evidence of the increasing popularity of the electric trolley bus, and its efficiency, is afforded by the decision of the Municipality of Georgetown, Penang, to augment its existing fleet.

GOOD GOING

In six consecutive months during the 1933-34 season, the Standard Motor Co., of Coventry, produced 16,000 cars. This means one car every four minutes of each working day.

The Automatic Clutch

Until you have driven a motor car with automatic clutch you will never appreciate how easy and how pleasant it can be. Simply relax, forget the clutch pedal, and use the gear shift lever as a gear selector. There is nothing new to learn. The Chrysler-Plymouth is the only motor car in its class that affords you the advantages of this remarkable aid to relaxed driving comfort.

SLAM PREMIUMS

(By LADY RHODES)

FROM what I read and hear, it seems that the question of slam premiums is very much in the air at present. Those contract players who are advancing their views can be divided into three groups:

1. Those who approve of the existing scale.
2. Those who consider that it is too high particularly in the case of the grand slam.
3. Those who object to the whole principle of slam premiums.

As between the first two groups, my sympathies are with the former. To arrive at a slam contract is not so simple as the opponents of premiums seems to assume. Moreover, even with the best bidding there usually remains an element of chance about the result.

I very often hear the view expressed that it is a pity to weight the scales further in favour of those holding exceptionally good cards. This is really an unfair argument and neglects the factor that even the best of hands must be properly bid and played if the most is to be extracted from them. As regards the proportion between the premiums for the grand and little slam, it will be remembered that the latest rules increased the ratio from two to one to three to one. This seems only fair. Not only are grand slams very difficult to bid but they also demand the greatest possible skill in the playing. In playing a little slam you have a leeway of one trick, but with the grand slam you cannot even afford to give away that one trick in order to secure the other twelve.

Personally, even with the best of cards and the best of partners I find that most of the grand slams that I am able to arrive at afford me considerable anxiety. I am more in sympathy with those who object to any slam premiums at all. The same might prove to be more agreeable, and would be certainly less exacting to the average player, if the anxieties attending slam bidding were done away with.

With Fewer Conventions
 Another benefit that would accrue from their abolition is that the game could be successfully played with fewer conventions. In particular, the highly artificial bids such as the Four-Five No Trump would disappear. Without the premiums for bidding and obtaining slams, Contract would resemble the French game of Pfaffend, with the addition of vulnerability.

Whatever may be the differing opinions held about slam premiums in ordinary play, it cannot be denied that in duplicate matches they tend to operate unfairly. This is particularly true of the short matches of 24 or 32 boards which are very popular just now. Take two examples:—

On one board a little slam is justifiably bid in both rooms, the bidders has a choice of two equally desirable or undesirable leads. In one room a lucky lead defeats the contract; in the other an unlucky lead gives it. One side scores 1,430 points; the other loses 100. If the remaining 31 hands are normal, the unlucky side is faced with an almost impossible task in attempting to catch up an average of 50 points a board.

A Fortunate Distribution
 Or again:—One side correctly bids a little slam while the other unjustifiably goes out for the grand slam and gets it, owing to an absurdly fortunate distribution of the opponent's cards; thus scoring, if vulnerable, 1,470 points extra for bad bidding. Unless, therefore, these short matches are played on the "One Board, One Point" system, the premiums for slam bidding should undoubtedly be very much reduced.

In common with several other expert writers, I have been invited to express my opinion on this question of slam premiums in ordinary rubber bridge and, before doing so, I should be very interested to hear from any of my readers who may hold pronounced views.

current to find and rescue her, it was utterly hopeless. In the gathering darkness he was swept downstream, and, not caring to live, his life was yet saved. For the cruel ice-cold torrent, intruding round a sudden bend, flung him out with other slams and jetsam, on to dry land. He was found some hours later, and for weeks he lay in a delirium almost akin to madness, his body in the clutch of pneumonia.

"Slowly he recovered, and eventually he emerged from that terrible experience, a grim, unbending man, the joy of youth forever gone—as you know him now, Bobbie, living the life of a recluse with his little white-haired mother. He is not yet thirty, and yet to all appearances he has lived his life, and asks nothing further from it."

The weeks passed with surprising quickness for Bobbie, the warm days yielding place at last to winter, which here on the highlands was cold and austere. To Paul Benton, they passed with something less than their usual monotony, for strangely, almost unaware, a subtle fragrance was creeping into his life again. As yet he actually did not know it, but that fragrance was Bobbie. He would find himself lifting his eyes from his work at times, to watch the quiet, busy little figure beneath the opposite window, the wintry sunlight glancing on her golden head. Again he would catch her in a dreamy mood, when her gaze would wander to the snow-capped hills, and her thoughts would wander farther; and at such moments the underlying wishfulness of Bobbie's sunny nature would be unconsciously revealed. As in a flash, the realisation came to him on one of these occasions—"She has known sorrow, too!"—and between them, all unknowingly, a spiritual link was forged.

Bobbie still loved to cross her own little bridge beneath the willows, and though the stream was becoming daily more turbulent, she would not desert it for the high white bridge, across which all other traffic went. Paul Benton, usually some distance behind her on their route to and fro, would often shake his head at her foolishness.

Then one morning of biting cold, when the mists still hung low over the town, and the ground was white with frost, Bobbie paused. In mid-stream, and a wild feeling of exultation took possession of her as, wrapped in the cold blanket of mist, she felt herself akin to the wildly tossing waters beneath her feet, cut off from the rest of the world. It seemed to her that her mountain creek was reaching a climax in its existence, and seeing her own life as she always did, the counterpart of this dearly-loved stream, she wondered if she were arriving very near some climax too.

At length she turned to proceed—her shoes slipped on the frost-coated log, and, vainly grasping for support, Bobbie fell with a cry into the treacherous stream. Her voice was heard by Paul Benton, crossing the bridge at the moment, and peering into the mist, he realised immediately what had happened.

As he rushed down to the bank, flinging off his heavy overcoat, he realised with startling clearness that this mountain torrent must not claim its second victim, for she had become dearer than life itself to him. With almost superhuman strength he faced the current, and at length found Bobbie clinging desperately to the overhanging bough of one of her willows, which had stretched out its kindly arms to save her.

Paul dragged the exhausted girl to the bank and rested the limp, bruised body tenderly in his arms. With a whispered, "Dear Paul," it was scarcely more than a sigh—she drifted into unconsciousness like a tired child.

While realising the urgent need for action, Paul yet lingered over this poignant moment of possession. He felt a surge of vital energy in the knowledge that having fought once more with that fateful stream, he had this time fought and won. The rumble of wheels sounded in the distance as Paul smiled down on those little hands, but slowly the smile froze into incredulity and then into bitter resentment. On Bobbie's left hand gleamed a diamond ring. To Paul it seemed that the grim figure of fate had once again intervened to snatch from him his heart's desire.

At his call the passing vehicle was drawn to a halt, and the welcome, burly figure of Dr. Woods emerged from the mist. With a quick grasp of the situation, he shortly had Bobbie restored to a state of dazed consciousness, and on the way home to the kindly ministrations of Miss Arnold. Paul Benton, however, tight-lipped and rigid, preferred a brisk walk home, and the wise old doctor, sensing the depths of some emotion, did not deter him.

Bobbie accepted without demur the week's rest imposed on her, in order that both mind and body might recover from the shock of the accident, and was quietly happy in the memory of that illuminating moment in Paul's arms.

But as the days passed with no word from Paul, and then a business letter from Scotland was delivered, read addressed from the office, she felt deeply hurt that he had undertaken so deliberately to avoid her, and growing restless, she began to ramble abroad by the banks of Mountain Creek. Had she seen, however, the wrath with which her employer had dealt with that letter from Scotland, addressed so unmistakably in a masculine hand, she would have found the incident most enlightening. Paul was wrestling with his problem by night and by day. His office, he told himself, was a refuge whither he might fly from thoughts of Bobbie, but she peeped that refuge with haunting memories. There she had been wont to sit at her typewriter, with the sun glancing on her bent head. Her low voice would sound at his elbow as of yore, and he would start painfully and then be plunged in a reverie.

One afternoon towards the end of the week, deserting the office, he too turned aside along the narrow path that led uphill by the banks of Mountain Creek. As he trudged along, he followed the weary treadmill of his thoughts—had Bobbie deceived him or was he deceiving himself? Could he so far break down his natural reserve as to ask her for an explanation? This latter query was suddenly solved for him in a most unexpected manner. Emerging from the shelter of the trees bordering the creek, he came out into an open space far up on the mountain side. Here two tributary streamlets, flowing from rugged ravines, tumbled wildly to a lower level and there conmingled.

Quiescent amid the tumult sat Bobbie, gazing from her point of vantage down over Sleepy Hollow township. At his approach she turned, and with a glad spontaneous cry of "Paul!" she held out her hands to him in welcome. Down crashed the barriers of Paul's icy reserve, and taking her warm hands in his, he told her freely of the past days of tortured uncertainty.

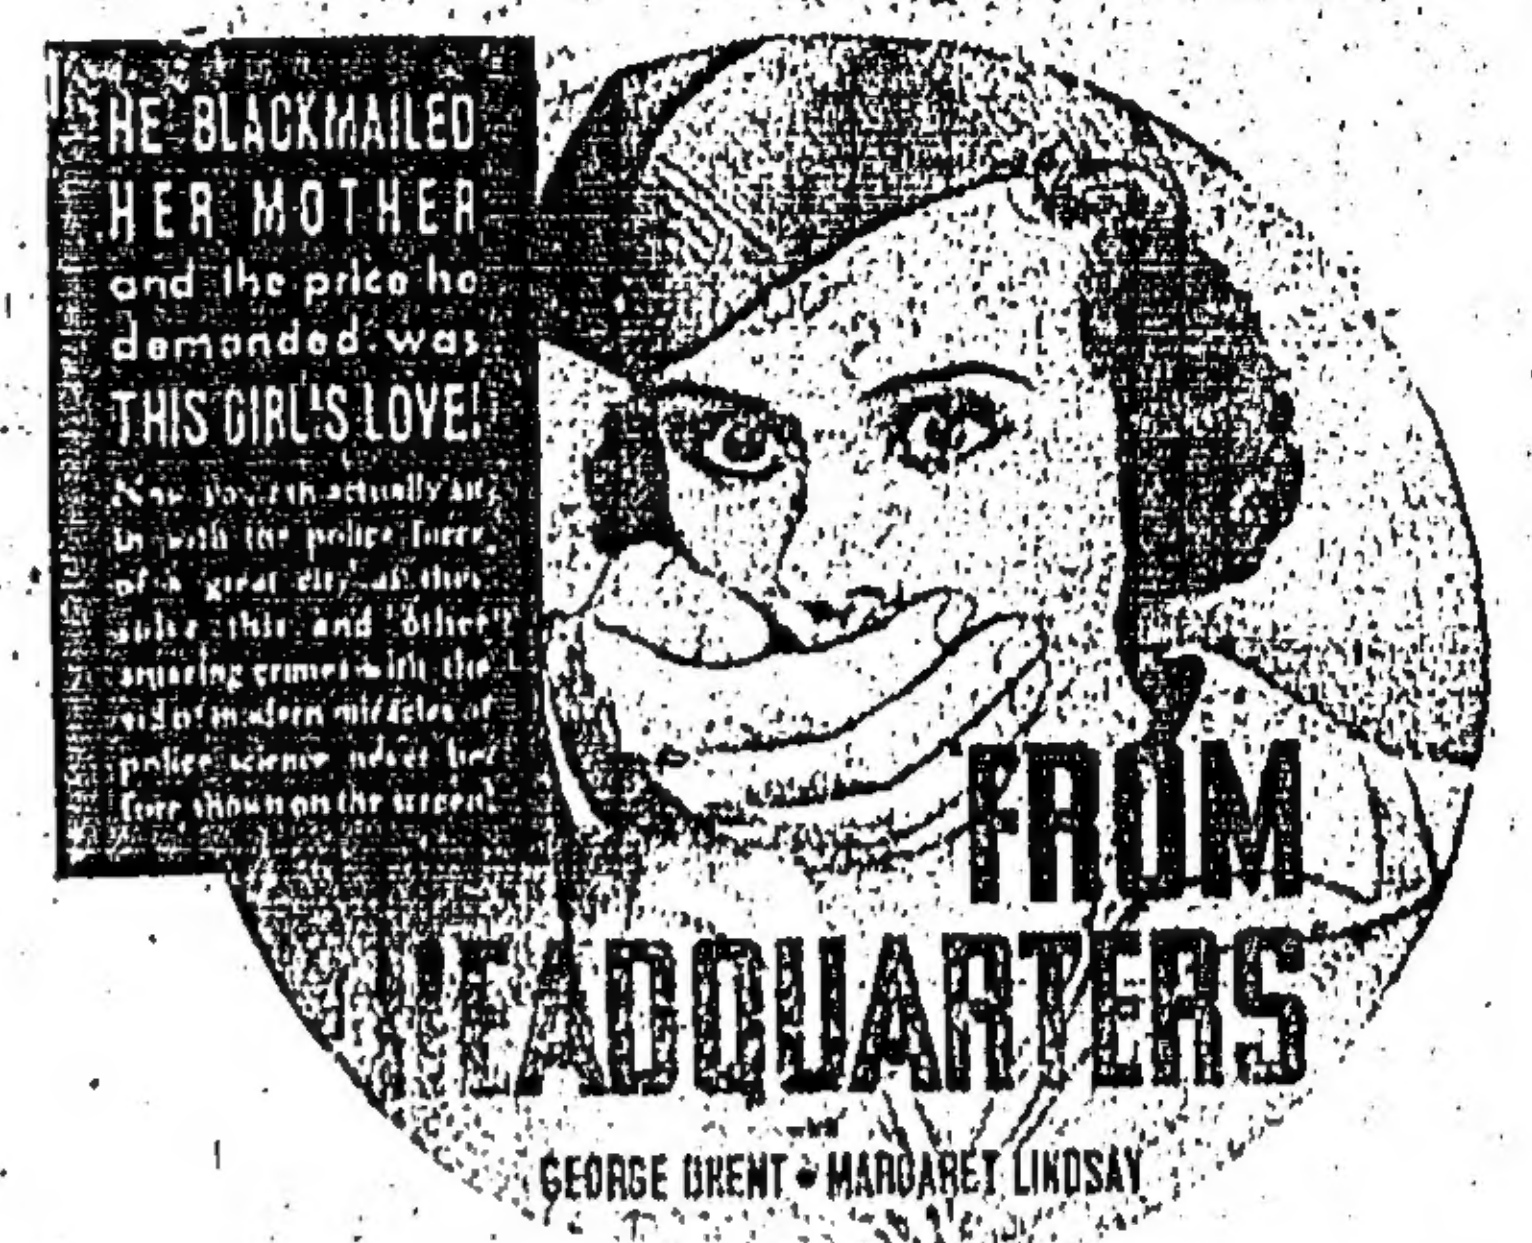

Seated side by side on a granite boulder, they were bathed in the glory of the setting sun, as Bobbie related the tragedy of her past life. "And now, Paul, you know my story, too," she said. "When the news came from India that Jack was killed, and I knew that I had to face life quite alone, and life such a wasteland—no little home together as Jack and I had planned—my courage failed me, and Paul, I did not want to live. I was very ill, and, oh, I did hope that I might die."

"But no, I came slowly back to life, and by the orders of the kind old doctor, in the world, I came out here to live my life amid new surroundings and new interest. And Paul—I am so glad I came." As this smiling up into his face, Paul's voice answered her. "See the two streamlets Bobbie—like us, they have passed each from a dark gorge of tragedy, till here in the sunlight they unite, and flow on together."

STEEL BOOM IN AMERICA

Highest Production Since July

PETROL PRICE WAR CONTINUES

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.

A trading decline, parallel with lower prices encouraged Wall Street chart compilers to-day.

Favourable factors were that the Youngstown district steel operations next week are estimated to be 39 per cent. of capacity, as against 35 per cent. this week, and the highest since midsummer, and that the car-loadings decline is less than seasonal.

Unfavourable factors were that the Socony Vacuum Corporation has reduced the New York gasoline price by half a cent.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

BETTER STEEL SHIPMENT FIGURES EXPECTED

New York, Yesterday. Dow Jones has predicted that the United States Steel Corporation's November shipments, to be announced on Monday, will show a small increase over October.—United Press.

BANKHEAD COTTON ACT LIKELY TO CONTINUE

Washington, Yesterday.—President Roosevelt states that the Administration favours the continuation of the Bankhead Cotton Act.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

BANKHEAD ACT EXTENSION FAVOURED BY ROOSEVELT

Washington, Yesterday.—President Roosevelt has reiterated that he favours the extension of the Bankhead Act as the best cotton control method.—United Press.
